Abstract

The manuscript Münster (in Westphalia/Westfalia), Bistumsarchiv, Freckenhorst, St Bonifatius Hs. 53 (D-MÜd PfA 53) is an antiphoner (antiphonary/antiphonal) that the Fraterherren of Münster wrote in the middle of the fifteenth century. The plainchant melodies are in German neumatic notation (Hufnagelschrift) and the texts are in Gothic textualis textura, textualis rotunda, textualis quadrata and textualis semi-quadrata. The study proceeds from the work of Hans Ossing, Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense (Alopecius-Druck 1537): Ein Vergleich mit den Handschriften des Münsterlandes (Regensburg, 1966). The work consists of:

- a description of the codicological and palaeographical characteristics together with an overview of the manuscript's content;
- a comparative study of:
 - the Advent responsory texts with reference to Renato-Joanne Hesbert's Corpus Antiphonalium Officii: Fontes earumque prima ordinatio [CAO, vol. 5] (Rome, 1975) and the interactive database on David Hiley's Cantus Planus website at the Institut für Musikwissenschaft der Universität Regensburg (http://www.uni-regensburg.de/Fakultaeten/phil_Fak_I/Musikwissenschaft/cantus/);
 - the plainchant melodies of the Christmas Matins responsories (Vigilia Nativitatis Domini and Nativitas Domini) with reference to the Antiphonale Monasteriense, D-MÜsa Msc. 433, D-MÜp K¹ 146, D-MÜd PfA Hs. 113, D-MÜd PfA Hs. 114, D-MÜd PfA Hs. 132, D-MÜd PfA Hs. 91 and D-MÜd PfA Hs. 66;
- a diplomatic edition of the plainchant melodies for the historiae (versified offices/rhymed offices) of Sts Gertrude (Gertrudis) of Nivelles, Boniface (Bonifatius/Bonifacius), and Achacius (Achatius) and the ten thousand (10 000) martyrs, which includes D-MÜd PfA Hs 202, B-TO 63, B-TO 64, D-MÜd PfA Hs 199 and D-MÜd PfA Hs 132;
- a comparative study of the content of PfA 53 and the Antiphonale Monasteriense derived from electronic indices created according to the guidelines of Cantus: A database for Latin ecclesiastical chant (<http://publish.uwo.ca/~cantus/>) maintained by Debra Lacoste.

Preface

I wish to acknowledge the generous assistance of the following persons and institutions:

- Dr Gottfried Minkenberg (Director), Dr Axel Metz, Dr Beate Sophie Fleck, Mr Stefan Jahn, Mr Bruno Wanitzek and Mr Christian Wiefel of the Bistumsarchiv, Münster. In particular, I would like to thank Dr. Horst Ruth and Ms Barbara Steinberg for their expert guidance and friendship;
- Ms Julie Strauss (University Librarian), Ms Shaheema Luckan and the staff of the WH Bell Library of the University of Cape Town;
- Pieter Mannaerts and Bruno Bouckaert of the Alamire Foundation, Leuven, for a copy of the Gertrude Office from the manuscripts Tongeren B-TO 63 and B-TO 64;
- The Hill Monastic Manuscript Library for the use of microfilm material;
- Dr Morné Bezuidenhout, my promoter, for his expert guidance;
- Mrs Corrie Geldenhuys, for comment on textual phrasing;
- Regens Dr Andreas Tapken and the staff and students of the Bischöflichen Priesterseminar Borromaeum, Münster for their hospitality and support;
- Mr De Villiers and Mrs Reynette Brink for their continuous encouragement and support.

Introduction

1 Rationale

The focal point of this dissertation is the antiphoner Münster, Bistumsarchiv, Pfarrarchiv Freckenhorst, St Bonifatius, Hs. 53 (D-MÜd PfA 53).¹ In its present state PfA 53 contains most of the office chants for the Temporale and Commune Sanctorum and plainchant for the Sanctorale from December (Nicholas, 6/12) to mid-August (Hippolitus, 13/8). It was copied in the middle of the fifteenth century, probably for the church and convent of canonesses of St Bonifatius in Freckenhorst, in the diocese of Münster, Westphalia. After the dissolution of the convent on 11 January 1812,² PfA 53 remained at Freckenhorst until the 1970s or 1980s, when it was relocated to the Bistumsarchiv in Münster.

This enquiry is part of an overarching research project at the University of Cape Town, which focuses on the diocesan Office liturgy of Münster that had remained in use for at least two hundred years after the reforms of the Council of Trent (1545-1563).³ At present, the larger project, which proceeds from Ossing's seminal work of the 1960s,⁴ focuses upon three areas of investigation. The first is a long-term exercise in data gathering and source description that will ultimately produce Cantus⁵ indices and descriptions of all the extant Office books written and printed for the cathedral of Münster and its associated parish churches during the late Middle Ages and the Renaissance. The late medieval versified offices in the Münster sources constitute the material for the second field of investigation. The sources contain a number of these offices with textual versions that are, as far as can be determined, almost unique to the Münster region. The initial objective in this regard is the production of critical editions of the texts and music of these offices along the lines of the volumes published in the Historiae series for the Study Group 'Cantus Planus' of the International Musicological Society.⁶ Thirdly, the larger project aims to develop a methodology for the comparison of pitch and notational variants in the sources that could lead to the establishment of “families” of Münster Office sources.

The purpose of this dissertation is to provide data that can contribute to the aims of this project. The work also proceeds from that of Ossing and concentrates on matters that lie within the ambit of the focus areas mentioned above. Some of the results, such as the indices of PfA 53 and the Antiphonale Monasteriense, are in a final format, which can be incorporated without more ado. The remainder of the material requires either some reprocessing in order to meet the requirements of the electronic resources for which they are ultimately intended; or further augmentation, due to the exclusion of areas that lie outside of the aims of the dissertation.

2 Aims

The main aim of this work, and the task which has also proven to be the most time-consuming, is to establish a comprehensive index of the content of PfA 53 and to provide a comparative index of at least one other source from the diocese of Münster. The choice for the second index has fallen upon the printed Antiphonale Monasteriense of 1537, since this is the most comprehensive source for the Office chants from this region. This part of the study takes place within the broadest parameters. From the outset of the project, it has been the intention to create indices of these two sources that are in a “ready state” for final editing by the Cantus staff. Great care has thus been taken to ensure the integrity of the indices.

The dissertation also aims to provide a description of PfA 53 that provides information about its codicological data, content and palaeography. In this part, the description of the codicological features related to the actual makeup of the manuscript is the most comprehensive. A detailed comparative study of PfA 53’s palaeographical features with related documents lies outside of the defined parameters. The intention in this regard is rather to provide a descriptive catalogue of the notational signs and letterforms that future studies, focusing specifically on the palaeographical features of plainchant manuscripts from the Münster Region, can incorporate.

The narrowest parameters for this study have been set for the attempt to locate the liturgical content of PfA 53 within the broader Western plainchant tradition. This part of the study addresses two concerns, the one being purely textual, while the other concentrates on melodic features. Firstly, there are many features of the plainchant texts in the Temporale of PfA 53 that allow one to identify it specifically with the Münster Office tradition. The inquiry here limits itself to the plainchant texts that the manuscript prescribes for a particular liturgical occasion and the order in which they appear. Considering the model that Hesbert's monumental study provides in the volumes of Corpus Antiphonarium Officii,⁷ as well as the electronic tools available for the analysis of his data,⁸ the reason for the selection of the Advent responsory texts as comparative material becomes obvious. At present, readily available data that allows one to extend this type of comparative investigation to the melodies across the entire tradition, is lacking. The inquiry into the melodic features is thus limited to a search for possible signs of close relations to PfA 53 within the Münster tradition itself. For reasons that are explained below, the choice has fallen upon the melodies for the Matins responsories of Christmas. The central aim here is to provide data that confirm PfA 53's liturgical provenance. All of this does not attempt to go beyond what one should probably describe as a rather narrowly prescribed pilot study.

In keeping with the objectives of the larger research project within which this dissertation falls, part of it is also devoted to the music of the versified offices, specifically those of a local character. The investigation concentrates on versified offices in PfA 53 that exhibit a limited dissemination not only in books of the broader Western plainchant tradition, but also in the extant books from the Münster region. PfA 53 is ideally suited to this purpose, since it contains plainchant for versions of three versified offices that, at most, occur in only one other manuscript written in the diocese and one or two other European sources. While it is the intention of the overarching project to arrive at complete editions of the readings, prayers and chants of these offices, this study sets parameters of a more limited nature. The aim is primarily to identify all the extant sources for each of the offices and to use these as the basis for a diplomatic edition that is confined to the plainchant responsory and antiphon melodies and texts.

Since the layout of the dissertation does not follow the order of the aims as set out above, the following section is intended as a preliminary guide to the actual order of events as they play out during its course and also the content of each chapter.

3 Outline of chapters

The first chapter opens with a discussion of the provenance of PfA 53. There is direct evidence which confirms the definite presence of the manuscript at the Freckenhorst church of St Bonifatius in 1841, where it remained until it was relocated to the Bistumsarchiv in Münster in the fourth quarter of the twentieth century. The majority of the published commentaries on PfA 53 agree that the inclusion of a proper office for St Bonifatius provides indirect evidence that the manuscript was indeed written for the church of Freckenhorst. If one considers that PfA 53 is the only extant Office book from the diocese of Münster with this proper Office, there is little reason to doubt this.

The chapter continues with a physical description of the manuscript in its present, restored condition, an overview of its content, and a survey of the palaeographical features. The section on palaeography identifies the different hands, and the styles of notation and script in the document. A catalogue of examples of the neumes and letterforms used by each hand provides supporting documentation.

Chapter two is a pilot study that examines the relationship between the textual and musical features of PfA 53 and other sources. The chapter includes a comparative study of the Advent responsory texts, based on Hesbert's data in CAO, which identifies the ordering of the texts for the second Sunday as a geographical index for the Münster region. The largest part of this chapter is devoted to a study of notation and pitch variants in the melodies of the Christmas responsories of selected sources written for churches in the diocese of Münster. It establishes a methodology for comparison, which employs exhaustive criteria for variance used in conjunction with Ossing's criteria. The conclusion suggests that both sets of comparative criteria point to the same source as the closest relative of PfA 53. As supporting documentation, the chapter includes a diplomatic edition of the Christmas responsories. Editorial principles that establish criteria for dealing with problematic ambiguous ornamental neumes preface the edition.

The third chapter is devoted to the versified offices in PfA 53. Firstly, it introduces the versified office in general, discussing the problematic nature of the term as well as textual and musical characteristics. An overview of responsories from three versified offices in PfA 53 introduces the reader to the characteristics that allow one to differentiate between late mediaeval compositional practice and the traditional layer of Gregorian chant. The chapter concludes with a diplomatic edition of the plainchant melodies and texts in the versified offices of Sts Gertrude of Nivelles, Boniface, and, Achacius and the 10 000 martyrs. An overview of the legends and the identification of all known sources that contain the versions of these offices as they appear in PfA 53, preface the edition itself.

Chapter four presents data extracted from the electronic indices of PfA 53 and the Antiphonale Monasteriense. The data are presented in two comparative tables that provide the reader with an overview of the textual content of the two sources. It presents a comparison of 1) the feasts and liturgical occasions; 2) the texts and the order of the texts that are prescribed for each feast; and 3) textual variants that may appear within the incipits of particular chant texts that the sources share. The chapter concludes with a discussion of the major points of variance and tables that identify the unique plainchant texts in each of the two sources.

4 PfA 53: review of literature

4.1 Catalogues and other books containing lists of sources

4.1.1 Hölker, “Kreis Warendorf”

This is the oldest description of PfA 53 and provides direct evidence that the manuscript was in the Freckenhorst parish archives in the 1930s. Hölker describes the manuscript as an antiphoner of which a number of pages at the end have been cut out, with 276 pages (measuring 36 x 27 cm) still remaining. His description of the number of pages as 276 is probably incorrect, since the late nineteenth-century note, indicating the last page of the manuscript, is in the lower margin of fol. 277v. He also comments on the severely damaged leather-covered wooden boards of the outer cover with missing clasps, and identifies the book as the work of the Fraterherren dating from the fifteenth century.⁹

4.1.2 Oeser, “Die Brüder des gemeinsamen Lebens”

Oeser’s study, completed as a doctoral dissertation in 1959 and published (revised) in 1962 with a reprint in 1964, cites Hölker and notes that the manuscript was considered lost by the late 1950s.¹⁰

4.1.3 Kohl, Das (freiweltliche) Damenstift Freckenhorst

Kohl’s chapter on Denkmäler includes a list of books used at Freckenhorst. He cites Hölker and Oeser but does not mention Ossing (see below). A significant aspect of his contribution to the literature on PfA 53 is that he provides a terminus ad quem (the first half of the 1970s) for the date when the manuscript was relocated from Freckenhorst to the Bistumsarchiv in Münster.¹¹

⁹ See p. 120.

¹⁰ See col. 392 in the 1964 reprint and Ossing, Antiphonale Monasteriense, 76 which cites p. 195 in the 1959 dissertation for this information.

4.1.4 Krämer, Handschriftenerbe des deutschen Mittelalters

Krämer (1989), which mistakenly gives the diocese for Freckenhorst as Osnabrück, simply lists PfA 53 as “Freckenhorst, Pfarr- u. DechaneiB[ibliothek], heute Münster, BistumsA[rchiv], Depositum, s.n., Antiphon, s. XV” without further comment.¹²

4.1.5 Bistumsarchiv, Münster, “Pfarrarchive Hand- und Druckschrifte”

This is an undated internal Findbuch document, housed in the Bistumsarchiv of Münster, listing manuscripts from the Münster parish archives, some of which have been deposited at the Bistumsarchiv. It lists PfA 53 under “Freckenhorst, St Bonifatius” as “PfA HS 053 Antiphonale 15. Jh.”¹³

4.1.6 Hinz, Handschriftencensus Westfalen.

This is the standard inventory of manuscripts in Nordrhein-Westfalen, published in 1999. PfA 53 is listed as an “Antiphonarium officii” under “Münster, Bistumsarchiv Pfarrarchive” as “Freckenhorst, St Bonifatius”, with the catalogue number “0212” and the shelf mark “PfA Hs. 53”. Hinz cites Hölker, Oeser, Ossing and Kohl as literature for PfA 53 and correctly mentions fol. 277v as the page with the nineteenth-century note.

5 Bettels, “Bemerkungeng zu Handschriften und Drucken”

Bettels (2000), who also supplies information about the number and size of the folios, the damaged binding, the coloured initials, the Fraterherren and the nineteenth-century note in the lower margin of fol. 277v, makes a number of additional observations.¹⁴

- PfA 53 and the gradual PfA 54, both dating from the fifteenth century, are the earliest extant books with Gregorian chant from Freckenhorst.
- The size of the book (27,5 x 35,5 cm) indicates that it was intended as a choir book.

¹¹ See p. 41: “jetzt in Besitz der Dechanei in Freckenhorst (Depositum im Bistumsarchiv Münster).” Kohl’s study was published in 1975.

¹² See p. 250.

¹³ Some of the manuscripts listed here are still housed at the parishes. The Findbuch, for example, lists the Stadtlohn, St Otger manuscripts (PfA 877, 878, 879) which are currently still in Stadtlohn.

¹⁴ See p. 75-76.

- The painted initials (some illuminated with gold) and general appearance of the book indicate that the community of Freckenhorst had the financial means to afford a costly book.
- Although different hands wrote the book, it is probably the work of a single scriptorium.
- While most of the chants belong to the traditional layer of the Gregorian repertory, some reflect a different style:
 - the range of some of the chants are so wide that they cover both the authentic and plagal modes;
 - the responsories often contain long melismas;
 - the chants also exhibit wide intervallic leaps.¹⁵

He is the first author who remarks on the existence of the added fol. 278, which is a later addition to the manuscript and does not form part of the work of the Fraterherren of Münster. The different handwriting, the colour of the parchment, and the use of a four-line staff for the Hufnagelschrift, instead of the five line staves used in the rest of the manuscript, all show that this is a loose folio added from another book.

Bettels also includes illustrations with photographs of fol. 106r and the later addition of fol. 278r.¹⁶

6 Hinz, “Verborgene Schätze”

Hinz (2000) provides the standard description of PfA 53 concerning the number and size of the folios and includes additional information about the different styles of script that the Fraterherren used in the book. He comments on the absence of direct evidence which would indicate that PfA 53 was, without any doubt, written for the church of St Bonifatius in Freckenhorst. Since St Boniface is the patron saint of the church, one would expect a large decorated initial as the first letter of the saint’s office. In PfA 53, the opening pages of the office for St Boniface are missing, making it impossible to determine this fact. He does, nevertheless, support Ossing’s observation¹⁷ that the wear and tear on the remaining pages of ¹⁵ Here Bettels is describing features of the late mediaeval versified office chants.

¹⁷ Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense, 74.

this office and the absence of a proper office for the saint in the Antiphonale Monasteriense, provide indirect evidence for PfA 53's intended destination.¹⁸

7 Ossing, Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense

Ossing (1966) supplies the most detailed information about PfA 53. He includes it as "Freckenhorst I (um 1450) Ant." in his list of sources from the diocese of Münster¹⁹ and he describes the manuscript under the heading "Freckenhorst (Im Haus des Organisten)".²⁰ He considers the inclusion of the feasts of the Finding of the Cross (relics at Freckenhorst) and St Boniface (patron) as evidence that the book was probably written for the church of St Bonifatius in Freckenhorst. The description of the manuscript's physical features (similar to that of Hölker) and content reflect its condition before restoration in the 1980s. In contrast to Hölker, he correctly identifies the last page of the book, before its restoration, by identifying the lower margin of fol. 277v as the page on which the late nineteenth-century note, indicating this, appears. He also argues that the main parts of the book, written by the Fraterherren of Münster, probably date from before 1450. Illustrations with photographs of fol. 10v (beginning with the responsory "Bethleem civitas dei summi" for the third Sunday in Advent), fol. 25r (beginning with the responsory "Descendit de caelis" for Christmas), fol. 105r-v (containing the Marian antiphons "Regina caeli laetare", "Ave regina caelorum" and "Pulchra es amica mea"), fol. 173v (containing items from the Commune Sanctorum),²¹ and fol. 229r (containing the Magnificat antiphon "Gloriosi confessoris Christi" from the versified office for St Liudger),²² are also included.

In his discussion of the major text variants that occur among the Münster sources, Ossing makes several observations that one can use as pointers to locate PfA 53 within this tradition. Some of his remarks are not relevant here, since the characteristics that he discusses fall into sections of the liturgy that are lacunae in PfA 53. The following list summarizes the most salient features:²³

¹⁸ See p. 95.

¹⁹ See p. 26.

²⁰ See p. 74-78.

²¹ See p. 79a-b.

²² See p. 216a.

²³ See p. 144-149.

- Manuscripts associated with the Fraterherren, including PfA 53, lack the additional fourth responsory “O dies omni voto recolenda” for the feast of the Visitation.²⁴
- Many of the antiphonal manuscripts include additional processional chants such as the responsory “Lapides torrentes illi dulces” in the office for Stephen the First Martyr.²⁵
- The eighth responsory on the feast of the Purification has a text variant in some sources: “Postquam impleti sunt dies” instead of “Postquam completi sunt dies”.²⁶
- The ordering of the series of responsories on Quinquagesima Sunday is unique to PfA 53 and one noted breviary, Münster, Bistumsarchiv, Generalvikariatsarchiv, Hs. 230 (GV 230).²⁷
- PfA 53, together with the antiphoner Münster, Bistumsarchiv, Pfarrarchiv, St Vitus Olfen Hs. 132 (PfA 132), is a good example of the liturgical tradition in Münster before the printing of the Antiphonale Monasteriense.²⁸

In his comparative study of the melodic and neumatic variants of the Christmas responsory “Descendit de caelis”,²⁹ Ossing divides the sources into two large groups, the first having thirteen points of variance among them, when compared to the Antiphonale Monasteriense, and the second exhibiting twenty-five such variants. He includes PfA 53 in the first group, that is, sources showing the closest kinship with the Antiphonale. He also comments here that ornamental neumes are the most prevalent in the manuscripts reflecting the older tradition, including PfA 53, and remarks that the Freckenhorst book contains a large proportion of “kleine Doppelnoten”, that is, strophic puncta attached to end of neumes such as the torculus. He concludes this part of the comparative study with a classification of the sources into five smaller groups, identified with letters of the alphabet from “A” (no or very little variance) to “G” (the greatest degree of variance). PfA 53 belongs to the “D” group and lies more or less ²⁴ The responsory is in the Antiphonale Monasteriense on fol. 359r.

²⁵ See PfA 53, fol. 31r. The responsory is absent from the Antiphonale Monasteriense.

²⁶ Both the Antiphonale Monasteriense (fol. 290r) and PfA 53 (fol. 211v) have the latter, more widespread, variant.

²⁷ See p. 62 and p. 75. If one numbers the standard ordering, which also appears in the Antiphonale Monasteriense (fol. 82r – 85r), sequentially as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, then PfA 53 (fol. 64r – 66r) has 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 10, 7, 8, 11, 12, 13, 9.

in the middle of the scale. His additional comparative study of the responsory “Dum compleretur”³⁰ from Pentecost Sunday, confirms these results.

Ossing’s study of the versified offices in the Antiphonale Monasteriense includes a complete list of these offices in PfA 53.³¹ However, his identification of the additional sources for the offices for Gertrude of Nivelles and Achacius does require some revision.³² One of his main concerns here is the melodic variants in the office for St Liudger, as they appear in a number of Münster sources that include PfA 53.³³

As far as PfA 53 is concerned, Ossing concludes that it is a characteristic example of the Office liturgy of the Münster region.³⁴ His numerous comments about the content of the manuscript point to a source revealing a kinship with the earliest layer of the Münster Office liturgy that has come down to us. Manuscripts postdating PfA 53 would more and more become susceptible to outside influences. This, more than anything else, justifies the selection of PfA 53 as the first source in a long-term project that aims to expand on Ossing’s insights into the plainchant and liturgy of the diocese of Münster.

Chapter 1

Provenance, Description and Palaeography

1 The Provenance of PfA 53

For many years scholars thought that PfA 53 was lost. However, various descriptions that have appeared in modern publications provide information about its provenance and present condition. The earliest identification of the manuscript appeared in 1936,³⁵ but by 1959, Oeser wrote that he could not find the manuscript.³⁶ In the mid-1960s, Ossing discovered the manuscript in the choir house of the church of Freckenhorst³⁷ and provided the first detailed description in his study of the printed Antiphonale Monasteriense.³⁸ While doing research in Münster during 2006, the author was fortunate enough to meet Ossing, who related the tale of how he had found the manuscript. Apparently, the management of the parish church of Freckenhorst had no idea which old manuscripts and books they had in their possession at that stage. Ossing stumbled upon the manuscript when he was in the choir house while the cleaner was busy placing some old books that had stood upon a shelf, near a window in the sun. When Ossing asked him why he was placing books that were clearly very old in direct sunlight, he replied that it helped to keep the books dry. Ossing inspected the books and found PfA 53 amongst them. As far as could be ascertained, the manuscript was still in the possession of the parish church of Freckenhorst towards the end of the 1960s.

At some stage, many of the manuscripts in the possession of the parish churches of the diocese of Münster in Westphalia were relocated and deposited at the Bistumsarchiv in Münster (BAM). It has not been possible to determine the exact dates for these events. Kohl mentions that at the time of his writing, PfA 53 was already at the Bistumsarchiv in Münster, although no documented evidence exists to support this claim.³⁹ The first documented evidence available is microfilm images: in 1983, when the Hill Museum and Manuscript Library microfilmed the manuscript, it was already at the Bistumsarchiv. The second and third images on the microfilm confirm this information. The second image is a typewritten page of the Hill Monastic Manuscript Library indicating that PfA 53 is project no. 39, 637. It states that the manuscript is kept at the Bistumsarchiv, Münster, as BAM Hs. 53 and was originally from the Pfarrarchiv St Bonifatius Freckenhorst. It also lists the number of pages in the manuscript and details about the missing pages. The microfilm was prepared on 8 January 1983.

The third image on the microfilm consists of three cards photographed on the inside of the lower cover of the manuscript. The first card confirms the Bistumsarchiv shelf mark number (Nr. 53), the origin as Freckenhorst, St Bonifatius⁴⁰ Church and that the book was deposited at the Bistumsarchiv. The second is a catalogue card (A 722) from the Bistumsarchiv on which an earlier or incorrect shelf mark numbering of Hs. 11 has been changed to the present number 53. The third card is a hand-written note confirming the original ownership of the parish church of Freckenhorst, with references to the writings of Hölker and Oeser mentioned above.⁴¹ According to information from the Bistumsarchiv, the restoration of the manuscript took place in 1998. Unfortunately, the Bistumsarchiv could not produce any documentation about this event.

In the manuscripts from the diocese of Münster that Ossing studied, he only found an office for St Boniface in PfA 53.⁴² Unfortunately, the first two pages of the office for St Boniface in the manuscript are missing. A large ornate or illustrated initial indicating the beginning of the office for the patron saint, together with the information contained in the manuscript, as well as the fact that Ossing found the manuscript at the parish church of Freckenhorst, would have provided conclusive evidence that the church and convent of Freckenhorst were indeed the intended recipients of this manuscript. Ossing, however, feels that the used condition of the remaining pages of the office of St Boniface provides sufficient evidence that the manuscript was written for the church of St Bonifatius of Freckenhorst.⁴³

⁴² For a list of the manuscripts that Ossing studied, please refer to Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense, 26-28.

⁴³ Ossing, Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense, 74, 77.

According to Bettels, no official document concerning the foundation of the convent and church of Freckenhorst has survived – the only surviving versions are those in Latin and in medieval Dutch-German, as recorded during the Middle Ages.⁴⁴ Kohl confirms this when he writes: “Die einzige schriftliche Quelle, in der Auskünfte über die Gründungszeit zu finden sind, stellt eine zu Anfang des 15. Jahrhunderts niedergeschriebene Legende mit dem Titel De constructione monasterii Freckenhorstensis dar, die auch in einer niederdeutschen Fassung vorliegt: Hyr begynnet de fundacie, wo de kercke und das kloster des stichtes tho Freckenhorst erst ys wonderlyken van der genade Godes getymmert”.⁴⁵

Legend describes the founding of the church as follows: one night Lord Everword's⁴⁶ shepherd, Frekkyo, collected the animals, as he always did around dusk to protect them from wolves and other wild animals while they were out grazing in the woods. That night he saw a faint light appearing that grew steadily with each passing night. He reported what he had seen to his master. Everword, convinced that the light was an indication of the site of holy relics, immediately set out to the place. He found the light just as his shepherd had described it, but by then the light had taken on the form of a house. He also saw the figure of a man. Whilst in prayer, he heard the voice of the apostle Peter, who ordered him to build a church where he had first seen the light. Everword then asked the opinion of Liutbert, the Bishop of the diocese of Münster at that time (849-870), who supported the project. While they were laying the foundations of the church, they found a rock with a footprint on it, which they (up until today) considered to be that of the apostle Peter.⁴⁷

Today, the church considers 24 December 851 as the date of its establishment.⁴⁸ The first abbess was Everword's wife, Geva, and after her, Thiatildis, Everword's brother's daughter.⁴⁹

Everword chose St Boniface as the patron saint because he had a high regard for the saint, who had converted his ancestors to Christianity and presented Everword's grandmother with his staff as a gift.⁵⁰ According to Breede & Nolde, St Boniface had promised Everword's grandmother that the staff would give her a miraculous sign at the time of his death. At the news of the saint's death, the grandmother put the staff into the ground, where it developed roots, grew into a tree and bore the most beautiful fruit.⁵¹ (Heathen killed St Boniface near Dokkum on a mission to the Frisians on June 5, 754).⁵² Everword also made frequent pilgrimages to the church of St Bonifatius in Fulda.⁵³

While on tour in the region, Bishop Liudbert brought some relics of St Boniface, as well as Maximus, to Freckenhorst in 860.⁵⁴ The community of Freckenhorst still celebrates the miracles performed by the saint's walking staff on 4 December.⁵⁵

2 Description of PfA 53

The following is a description of the manuscript in its restored (1998) condition.

PfA 53 has two wooden boards with a leather covering. The leather covering has 5 pieces of bone or ivory as decoration, both at the front and at the back of the book. The covering is 39 cm in length and 27,5 cm in width, with the spine 13,5 cm in width. The book fastens with two leather straps and clasps on the front. The leather itself still shows signs of decoration. Inside the top cover, pasted onto the wooden board, is a small, typewritten label with the following information:

Between the (current) last page of the manuscript and the back covering is a wooden board, meant as support, next to the remaining parts of the torn-out pages of the manuscript. Dark, plaited leather bindings strengthen the back of the book at the top and the bottom.

The Arabic foliation, in pencil, begins with folio 3 on first Vespers for the first Sunday in Advent. Folios 1 and 2 were removed after the addition of Arabic numeration. The folio numbering and contents of the manuscript then follow without a break up to folio 57v, where the manuscript breaks off in the verse of the second reponsory at Matins for Feria 5 per annum. Folio 58, containing the rest of Matins on Thursday, Friday and the beginning of Saturday per annum, is missing. PfA 53 then continues on fol. 59r with the second reponsory of Sabbato per annum. With the exception of folio 123, which is numbered twice, the content and numbering then follow accordingly up to the end of the last Sunday after Pentecost on folio 169v. Folio 170 is an insertion that Ossing describes as an “undeutlich beschriebenes Blatt aus dem 18. Jh.”⁵⁶ containing, amongst other things, material for the Commune Evangelistarum and St Joachim.

The Commune sanctorum now follows on folio 171r up to a lacuna after the first Vespers of the Commune unius martyris on folio 179v. Folios 180 and 181, which should contain the first two Nocturns for this common, are missing and the manuscript continues with the first reponsory of the third Nocturn up to a lacuna, which begins in the third responsory on the second Nocturn of the Commune virginum on folio 188, which is numbered twice.

Folios 189 and 190 that would have contained the rest of this common are missing. Folios 191 and 192 consist of another insertion, containing the Mass items that follow second Vespers during Easter Week and the Alleluia antiphons at Matins for the same week, before the Sanctorale continues with the feast of St Nicholas on folio 193r. After this, the Sanctorale continues up to a lacuna in the fourth antiphon at lauds of the office for the Finding of the Cross on folio 236v. The manuscript then continues after the beginning of the third antiphon in the first Nocturn for the feast of St Bonifatius on fol. 237r, up to another lacuna in the second antiphon of the third Nocturn for the feast of St Hippolytus. This is the point where the manuscript concluded in the early nineteenth century when a handwritten note was added in the lower margin of this folio indicating that: “Mit Einschluss dieses sind jetzt noch zweihundert sechs und siebenzig Blätter in diesem Buche. Freckenhorst 3. Sept. 1841 H. Schulte Pfd.”

⁵⁶ See Ossing, Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense, 76.

At some point after this, folio 278, a fragment from another manuscript, containing parts of the feasts for Sts Cecilia and Clementis, was added. If one considers that Ossing did not mention this addition in his description of PfA 53, it appears that this folio was added sometime after the late 1960s.⁵⁷

PfA 53 thus consists of:

- three main parts: a Temporale on folios 3-169, a Communale on folios 171-188.2, and a Sanctorale on folios 193-277 (all with lacunae); and
- three later additions on folios 170, 191-192 and 278.

The folios in the manuscript are not all the same size, and contain a number of different scripts. The following table lists the measurements and other details of representative pages.

| Fol. | Size | Written space | Staff lines | Staffs per page | Staff height | Catch words | Other |
|------|----------------|----------------|-------------|-----------------|--------------|-------------|--|
| 5 | 38,5 x 26,5 cm | 28,3 x 18,5 cm | 5 | 11 | 1,6 cm | No | |

The Freckenhorst Antiphoner is one of a few surviving manuscripts, dating from the period before the Anabaptist Kingdom (1534-35), during which countless books were lost, notably those from the diocese of Münster.⁵⁸ Parts of surviving manuscripts dating from before this period were put together afterwards to form new liturgical books. This is a possible reason for the different stylistic influences and extra folios present in this manuscript.⁵⁹

3 Content

Chapter 4 and the appendices contain a complete description and listing of the content of the manuscript. The following table provides the reader with an overview of the different feasts in PfA 53 and the folio numbers on which they appear. The table also includes the dates of the saints' feast days.

⁵⁸ The Anabaptist Movement decided to make Münster their capital, a sort of "new Jerusalem". After the liberation of the town of Münster on 24 June 1535, some liturgical books were reconstructed using different parts from different manuscripts. For a brief English introduction to Anabaptism in Münster, please see Hsia, ed., "Münster and the Anabaptists", 51-70; Grieser, "A tale of two convents: Nuns and Anabaptists in Münster 1533-1535", 31-47; Waite, "The Dutch nobility and Anabaptism: 1535-1545", 458-485. Waite mentions, in "The Dutch nobility and Anabaptism 1535-1545", 479, that the Countess Agnes von Limburg-Styrum, a supporter of Anabaptism, became the abbess of the "wealthy" cloister of Freckenhorst in 1527. She started a radical reformation to reform the cloister in an evangelical fashion. The result was that by 1532, the monastery of Freckenhorst had separated completely from the Catholic Church. Kohl in "Freckenhorst - Damenstift", 314, remarks that the convent practised the Catholic religion up to the Anabaptism movement, whereafter the convent became predominantly Protestant, and then converted back to the Catholic religion in 1650.

⁵⁹ Ms. 4.b.5 in the Grey Collection of the National Library of South Africa in Cape Town is a possible example of this type of later reconstruction in Münster during the sixteenth century. It is a composite manuscript consisting of parts taken from a noted breviary and an antiphoner (both dating from the late thirteenth century), that were put together in an effort to reconstruct a complete liturgical book. The presence of an office for St Liudger in the antiphoner is a clear indication of a Münster provenance. See Steyn, ed., Medieval and Renaissance manuscripts in the Grey Collection, vol. 1, 13-15. Haller, "Liturgische Handschriften", 198 mentions one example of a book that was repaired after the Anabaptist destruction of liturgical books in Münster. According to a note on the first page of the missal manuscript Münster, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, N.R. 1003 (D-MÜu N.R. 1003) the manuscript, which the Anabaptists damaged during their rule in Münster, was repaired after 24 June 1535: "Hic liber fede laceratus ab impiissimis anabaptistis, restitutus est et recuperatus anno 1535 post Johannem Baptistam".

4 Palaeography

Several hands wrote PfA 53:⁶¹

Hand 1: folios 3-10;

Hand 2: folios 11-169;

Hand 3: folios 171-188;

Hand 4: folios 191-192;

Hand 5: folios 193-277; and Hand 6 folio 278.

In each instance, the style of the musical notation changes together with the script.

4.1 The Musical Notation

The neumes of PfA 53 are in German Gothic notation on staff lines. In Gothic notation, contrary to square notation, the scribes held the pen diagonally to the line. They placed strong strokes on the vertical downward strokes as well as the horizontal strokes, but the upward strokes are of a finer nature.⁶² The basic shapes, however, stayed similar to those of the German and central European notations already in use from the twelfth and thirteenth centuries.

In German Gothic notation, the neumes developed into what scholars refer to as Hufnagelschrift since the head of the virga is shaped like a horseshoe nail.⁶³ In PfA 53 the virga displays the typical characteristic of this style of notation in all the hands: the lower extremity of the sign is tapered, while the head is thickened into the nail shape.⁶⁴ The typical Gothic punctum has a diamond shape.⁶⁵ Isolated puncta only appear consistently in Hands 3 and 5 in PfA 53. Its appearance in Hand 2 is less consistent. Hand 1 only employs an isolated punctum if the pitch is on the lowest line (or below this line) on the staff, in order to prevent the stem of the virga from interfering with the text. Hand 4 on the insertion of folios ⁶¹ The later, eighteenth-century addition on folio 170, which, together with some ugly notation, features very low-grade handwriting, consisting of a hybrid Gothic style, an ugly cursive style, and what appears to be a weak imitation of humanistic miniscule, has little palaeographical value and will not be considered in this study. Three or four different people probably wrote this folio.

⁶⁵ Stäblein, Schriftbild der einstimmigen Musik, 68.

191 to 192 is inconsistent, using a variety of punctum shapes, including the diamond shape and a longer diagonal or vertical stroke. Single pitches in Hand 6 are always indicated by a virga. Here the diamond-shaped punctum only appears as part of compound neumes.

There is not much documentation about Hufnagelschrift and that which is available is mostly contradictory. The term is mostly used in connection with later manuscripts of the Middle Ages where, when referring to manuscripts dating from the thirteenth century, the term Gothic notation is used. The author agrees with Hourlier, who notes that there does not really exist a clean break between the two – where the one ‘ends’, so to speak, and the other starts – since that which characterises Hufnagelschrift can already be seen in the Gothic notation of the thirteenth century. He proposes rather to refer to a single category, German notation, and provides dates to distinguish between the various manuscripts and the notation therein.⁶⁶

PfA 53 is written on staves consisting of five black lines, with C and F clefs. A small black dot (which is very similar to the apostrophic neume) indicates the F clef – this is common German practice.⁶⁷

When comparing PfA 53 to manuscripts in Stäblein’s study,⁶⁸ as well as with his table on page 32, the resemblances in the notation are clear. The notation in Stäblein’s example 67 is very similar to Hands 2 and 5 in particular. The liquescent neumes, however, differ. All the liquescent signs in the Stäblein example connect directly to the foregoing virga, so that the neume has a shape that resembles a walking stick. The following tables contain examples of the neumes in the different hands.⁶⁹

The most common apostrophic neumes in PfA 53 are the bipunctum and the tripunctum. Sometimes there is also an apostrophic neume after a compound neume, the most common being the climacus, scandicus, clivis or pes. In such cases, it is sometimes difficult to distinguish between an apostrophic neume and a liquescent sign.

The style of the notation in Hands 2 and 5 are very similar. This evidence supports the idea that scribes from the same school (the Fraterherren of Münster) wrote these parts of PfA 53.⁷⁰ The information concerning the script will consolidate this theory.

4.2 The Script

The two main scripts, which feature in PfA 53, are Gothic textualis textura and Gothic textualis rotunda.

As mentioned above, there are six different handwritings in PfA 53.

Hand 1: fol. 3-10;

Hand 2: fol. 11-169;

Hand 3: fol. 171-188;

Hand 4: fol. 191-192;

Hand 5: fol. 193-277; and

Hand 6: fol. 278.

Hands 2 and 5 are more rounded (Gothic textualis rotunda) than Hand 1 (Gothic textualis textura). According to Ossing, parts of PfA 53 were a product of the Fraterherren of Münster, more specifically, that of Hands 2 and 5.⁷¹

Hands 2 and 5 form the bulk of the manuscript: 234 folios out of 277. The following table contains examples of the different handwritings in PfA 53. The words domini and sancto were used to facilitate comparison. If one of these words did not appear in the specific handwriting, something similar was provided.

Table 18 is a comparative table, consisting of an example of each letter as it appears in the different hands. By comparing each hand's letters and how they are formed, it is possible, as with the notation, to see that Hands 2 and 5 are similar in style.

Table 18: Example of letters from the different hands in PfA 53

⁷² The c connects to the next letter by lengthening the top part of the c to such an extent that sometimes it looks like a t.

The use of Gothic script first started in Northern France and Belgium during the eleventh century.⁷³ During this period, many intellectuals and scholars of the age regarded France as a centre for learning and travelled there to learn about the arts and literature. This expedited the German transition to the Gothic script. The popularity of the Cistercian Order across Europe further expedited this transition. The Cistercian Order developed a reputation in France for their book production “with very uniform script and decoration”.⁷⁴

In Western Germany, most scribes were already using an angular writing style. This made the adoption of the Gothic script in this area even easier. A typical characteristic of northern Gothic script is that the words tend to appear as if in “block-like units”, because of the “stretched shafts and the interconnecting bows”⁷⁵ of the individual letters. This characteristic, however, is entirely lacking in German manuscripts of the thirteenth century and in the manuscripts dating from the early fourteenth century.⁷⁶

4.2.1 Gothic textualis textura

The pages of Hand 1 consist of eleven lines of text Gothic textualis textura. This script reached the height of its popularity during the thirteenth century. Its form changed somewhat during the fourteenth century, using a bit more of “an embellished, over-elaborate, or even knotty character”.⁷⁷ However, basic characteristics stayed the same. Bischoff notes that, before the fifteenth century, no regular book trade existed in Germany and thus no real type of development could have stemmed from it. During the fifteenth century, the use of this script started to decline. Factors that contributed to its decline included the appearance of the Gothic bastarda scripts. In later centuries, the textura script appeared only in pontificals, canons of the mass and breviaries, as well as Bibles and books used for reading in the monastic refectory. This script was used for the layout of German poetry as well as schoolbooks. The use of the textura script was also an indication of the importance of a document. Printers and writers only used the textura script for decrees and legal documents.⁷⁸

⁷⁶ Bischoff, Latin Palaeography, 133.

⁷⁸ Bischoff, Latin Palaeography, 136.

A characteristic of the Gothic textualis textura, especially noticeable from the fourteenth century onwards, is that the letter a is divided in the middle by a straight, horizontal line.⁷⁹ During that same period, the i became dotted. In the twelfth century, the r became more exaggerated, and then developed even more in the thirteenth century, when in most cases the “shoulder-stroke was ... separated from the stem”.⁸⁰ In this type of script the w is mostly portrayed by two vs joined together.

4.2.2 Gothic textualis rotunda

This script first appeared in about 1250.⁸¹ Textualis rotunda favours the suppression of a break in letters in favour of roundness. In this script, words normally end in a thin hair stroke, especially on the letters m and n, also connecting the letters to those of the next line. It also makes use of the rectangular a.⁸² Textualis rotunda is a type of heavy textura used in “Holland and Germany by the Bretheren of the Common Life and the Augustinians of the Windesheim Congregation”.⁸³

This script can be recognised by the treatment of the bottoms of the minims – these are rounded off with a natural upward curve of the pen, instead of the specially applied ‘diamond-shaped’ feet.⁸⁴

Hand 2 is in Gothica textualis rotunda. These pages contain eleven lines of text and notation. Some of the margins contain decorations in lilac or red colours. These decorations are mostly connected with the illustrated capitals (for example, folios 18r, 20v, 22r and 23).

Hand 4 is also in Gothic textualis rotunda, but the style of the handwriting is low-grade and not beautiful when compared to Hands 2 and 5. These pages contain ten lines of text and notation.

Hand 5 is also in Gothic textualis rotunda and is very similar to Hand 2. The pages contain twelve lines of text and notation. There are ligatures between the letters d-e, d-o and d-a, s-t, c-o, c-a, c-i, c-d, s-s, c-t, t-u and t-a. The round r now appears in words and not just at the end of words.

⁷⁹ Bischoff, Latin Palaeography, 135, refers to this as the “box-a”.

4.2.3 Gothic textualis quadrata

A characteristic of the Gothic textualis quadrata is the treatment of the bottoms of the minims, which have consistently applied feet.⁸⁵ Hand 6 is one additional folio in a compact Gothic textualis textura script.

4.2.4 Gothic textualis semi-quadrata

Gothic textualis semi-quadrata is a mixture of the characteristics of the Gothic textualis rotunda and the Gothic textualis quadrata. Some of the bottoms of the minims have applied feet, whilst others are finished off with a natural, rounded, upward curve, like that of the textualis rotunda.⁸⁶ Hand 3 is in Gothic textualis semi-quadrata. These pages consist of ten lines of text and notation.

4.2.5 The use of abbreviations, initials and capitals

The abbreviations for the chant texts are hym (hymns), a (antiphons), inv (invitatories) and V and R (versicles and responsories). The incipit of the relevant psalm text, together with notation, sometimes appears together with the notation of the differentia. The abbreviation ps precedes the psalm texts. The only punctuation sign used consistently throughout the manuscript is a period.

Capital letters and initials are important clues for the determination of the position and genre in liturgical manuscripts. The term ‘initial’ applies to those letters at the margin, while ‘capitals’ or ‘capital letter’ would refer to the kind of letter that begins this sentence.⁸⁷

All capital letters are calligraphic, which means that they are the work of a scribe, rather than an artist. These letters consist of pen work that is sometimes highlighted. The scribe wrote these letters at the same time that he wrote the rest of the text. This is not the case for the larger letters. An exception to this is the plain, calligraphic size 2 initial, which is a bit smaller than the normal size 2 initial, and which the scribe adds as he writes the text.⁸⁸

One can classify capitals according to their size, colour and decoration – these are indications that show the importance of the text that follows a capital letter.⁸⁹

- Size 1 or the unqualified word ‘capital’. This letter does not extend into the space below or above the line of the letters, nor is it normally coloured or highlighted. The capital does not necessarily appear at the beginning of a line, but also whenever it is required. In special cases, this size capital follows an initial.⁹⁰
- Size 1+ or the large capital. The large capital extends into the space above the line of the letters. It may be in colour, but it is not usually highlighted. According to Hughes, the larger capital does not necessarily require a new line, but occurs whenever it is required.⁹¹
- The ‘extended capital’ is distinctly larger than the ‘large capital’ and extends well into the musical stave. It is usually not coloured, but may have a highlight. This sort of capital normally appears in the margin. It is sometimes difficult to distinguish this letter from the size 2 initial.
- The size 2 letter or an ‘initial’. This initial stretches from the line of text to the top of the musical stave accompanying that text, so one line of text and one stave (1+1). This initial can appear plain in some instances, not necessarily undecorated, but calligraphic rather than artistic. This initial can be coloured in some areas with red, blue, gold or silver. Although it is still relatively small, some faces appear in the margin in later manuscripts. A capital can follow the initial as the second letter of the word. The initial is usually placed in the ruling of the page, at the margin, but there are exceptions where the letter is within the course of the line. With this initial, advance planning would have been necessary, with the scribe leaving space in the text with a tiny cue letter for the artist. The scribe did not leave any space for the letters I and J and the ascenders and descenders of P and L, because these initials were placed in the margin. The size of these letters also does not conform to the characteristics of the initial as set out above, although these letters are clearly the equivalent of the size 2 initial. These letters normally extend over two lines of text. Sometimes they are difficult to see on the microfilm of a tightly bound book.⁹²
- Hughes calls initials that extend over three, four or more lines, or sometimes the whole page, ‘larger initials’. These larger initials indicate the major landmarks of a manuscript, and are usually the product of an artist, rather than the scribe.⁹³

The following are larger initials in PfA 53 that stretch over eight lines and represent major landmarks in the manuscript:

- H Hodie nobis celorum rex fol. 24v (Nativitas Domini)
- V Vespere autem sabbati fol. 106v (Vigilia Pasche)
- A Angelus domini fol. 106v (Dom. Resurrectionis)
- V Veni Sancti Spiritus fol. 126r (Vigilia Pentecoste)
- G Gloria tibi Trinitas fol. 131v (De Trinitate)
- O O pastor eterne fol. 193r (Sanctorale)

These are blood red in colour and have ornamental decoration on the inside in green and red colours.

Hand 1 only uses red and blue extended capitals for the beginning of the chants.

Hand 2 alternates between extended capitals that are alternatively red and blue in colour with extended capitals in black ornamental style.

In Hand 2, the size 2 initial is not only used to show the beginning of an important office, but it also appears within such an office, for example, the beginning of Lauds in the office for Nativitas Domini. The following table shows the use and positions of the size 2 initial in Hand 2:

Table 19: Position and use of the size 2 initial in Hand 2

In Hand 3 some extended capitals feature human faces, some in profile: Benedicam and Dum on folio 171v and Vidi on folio 172r. Folio 173 has an example of a human face to the front: Non. Some of the capitals have ornamental decoration, while others are plain. Some capitals take the form of an animal, for example, a snake (Sancti, fol. 173v) or dragons (Domine, fol. 176r and In, fol. 177v). Other animal decorations are Benedictionem (fol. 184v), Dixit (fol. 185r), Justum (fol. 185r and fol. 186r). Most of the extended capitals are still in colour: green, red, blue, or black. These decorations do not signify the beginning of any important chants – the choice of location for these decorations seems random. In Hand 4 it is difficult to tell the extended capital and the size two initial apart. A definite size 2 initial is the D in Dum on folio 171r – it is singular in its ornamental decorative design.⁹⁶ The heavily decorated size 2 initial I appear on folios 173v, 174v, 177r, 183r, 183v, and 185r. On folio 183r and 183v, these decorations appear in red, blue and copper colours.

Hand 4 starts with a red, extended capital H. There are five large red capitals on this folio (three large capital As with the word Alleluja, and two large capitals H with the word H[a]ec). The rest of this section's capitals are all size 1 capitals that are all in black.

The use of initials and capitals in Hand 5 is very similar to that of Hand 2. Hand 5 also alternates between extended capitals that are alternatively red, black and blue in colour, with extended capitals in black ornamental style. The beginnings of most of the saints' offices start with an ornamentally decorated size 2 initial, except for the offices for Gregory, Gertrude, Vitus, Acacius, Anne and the Finding of Stephen. A size 2 initial also indicates the first chant of Lauds in the office for Stephen. The offices for Markus, Peter in Chains, The Sending Forth of the Apostles and Walburga all start with an extended capital.

Hand 6 uses extended capitals at the beginning of each chant.

5 Conclusion

It is evident that the general characteristics of the Gothic notation (Hufnagelschrift) and script, which became popular in Germany during the thirteenth century, frequently appear in the Freckenhorst manuscript, for example:

- The use of the diamond-shaped punctum. However, this is not the only sign used for the punctum in this manuscript – a diagonal stripe, like that of a point of a quill pressing down, is also used to signify a punctum, as well as a horizontal line (when in conjunction with a virga) in the later added pages.
- Gothic notation is characterised by the clivis with two vertical shafts. This is not used exclusively; the clivis consisting of a punctum connected to a vertical downward stroke is also used.

Through a limited comparison with the script of other manuscripts, it is possible to see that this manuscript definitely includes elements from early-, as well as later-epoch Gothic script, as developed in Germany.

⁹⁶ The illustrations on the initial D (fol. 171) show a remarkable resemblance to the illustrations on the capital P, which forms part of an example in Stäblein's study. Example 72 is from a German gradual dating from the fifteenth century, and is currently in the Diözesanmuseum in Brixen (Stäblein, Schriftbild, 202-203).

The major parts of PfA 53 appear in Gothic textualis rotunda styles. The manuscript also features Gothic textualis textura, Gothic textualis quadrata and Gothic textualis semi-quadrata styles.

One could argue that the lacunae in the manuscript and the later insertions and additions could be a result of the Anabaptist uprising in Germany (1533-1535), which resulted in the destruction of many manuscripts, as well as literature and art. This theory does not explain the difference between Hands 1 and 2, since no lacuna exists between the different styles of writing: the word Syon splits into two. The first part of the word Sy is the last word on folio 10v (Hand 1) and the second part of the word on is the first word on folio 11r (Hand 2). A possible explanation for this is that the Fraterherren of Münster took over the manuscripts from a scribe from an unknown diocese or scriptorium to continue and complete it.

Chapter 2

Comparative studies of the Advent and Christmas responsories

1 Introduction

Ossing's work includes a detailed comparative study of the pitch variants in the Christmas responsory "Descendit de caelis" as it appears in the Antiphonale Monasteriense and a number of representative manuscripts from the diocese of Münster. His aim is to group related sources together and to ultimately establish an archetype or model for the Antiphonale Monasteriense.

While the aims of this investigation are similar with regard to PfA 53, the intention is not to discover an archetype or model, but merely to identify manuscripts from the diocese of Münster that are closely related to the Freckenhorst antiphoner.

Whereas Ossing selects only one chant, the results, presented below, are based on a larger group of liturgically unified chants. Initially, the Advent responsories were selected in order to provide data that one could, at a later stage, use in conjunction with Hesbert's comparative study of the Advent responsory texts.⁹⁷ This idea had to be abandoned due to the lacunae for some of the Advent responsories in both PfA 53 and the manuscripts selected for comparison. Instead, the choice fell upon the Matins responsories from the offices for the Vigilia Nativitatis Domini and the Nativitas Domini.

Among the sources included in this comparative study, Ossing excludes D-MÜd PfA 91, D-MÜp K¹ 146 and D-MÜd PfA 114, since he considers these to be similar to other manuscripts that form part of his comparative investigation. He associates D-MÜd PfA 91 with D-MÜd PfA 66, and D-MÜp K¹ 146 with the Antiphonale Monasteriense and declares that D-MÜd PfA 114 is a copy of D-MÜd PfA 113.⁹⁸ These manuscripts are included here, since the criteria for comparison, employed in this study, are far less restricted than those of Ossing and could lead to variants that allow one to distinguish between the books that he paired.

Ossing's comparative method only considers true pitch variance. This means that he ignores liquescence, other ornamental neumes, direct pitch repetition and the grouping of neumes over melismas. He thus only considers pitch variance resulting from the frequency changes of pitches in the same position and the addition or subtraction of one or more non-repetitive itches.⁹⁹ In what follows, more expansive criteria are added to those of Ossing to compare the melodies in PfA 53 with other Münster sources.

2 The Advent responsory texts

Ossing's descriptions of the Münster sources indicate that those that have not lost their Advent section due to the ravages of time share the same order of texts for the responses of the Advent responsories. The same does not hold true for the verse texts, since the sources reflect two traditions. The one only appears in the two Nottuln Antiphoners, PfA 113 and PfA 114, while the other is common to the Antiphonale Monasteriense and the remaining Münster sources. Although there is a lacuna in PfA 53 for the first seven responsories of Sunday I in Advent, the response and verse texts of its remaining Advent responsories agree with the broader tradition of the Antiphonale. One can therefore assume that the entire set of responsory texts originally included in PfA 53 would have reflected this order.

Having determined that there is a standard order of Advent responsory text for the majority of the Münster texts one can now inquire to what extent this ordering is unique to its geographical location. The value of this type of information for source studies dealing with matters such as provenance and the identification of liturgical models is obvious.

The Cantus Planus website that the Institut für Musikwissenschaft of the Regensburg University¹⁰⁰ hosts provides an interactive database that allows for comparative searches through the Advent responsory series in CAO. The following table presents the text incipits of the Advent responsory series in PfA 53. Square brackets and asterisks indicate missing and partial texts respectively, included here from the Antiphonale Monasteriense, while the two-digit numbers refer to Hesbert's numbering.¹⁰¹

The following table presents the responsory series for Advent in PfA 53 against Hesbert's so-called archetype Advent series:

Sunday I

Fre 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19

Arc 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49

Fre 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 91

The responsory series for Advent I, Advent III and responsories one through nine for Advent IV are standard templates. An indication of this is the large amount of sources in which these series appear: 294 manuscripts for the first set, 273 for the third set, and 189 for the fourth set. The series for Advent IV with the additional or alternative responsory produce a mixed bag of only seven other manuscripts in the interactive database: Aachen, Stadtarchiv, 187; Epinal, 80; Monza, c. 12.75; Monza, c. 16.82; Oxford, Bodleian Library, Lat. lit. e 5; Paris, Bibliothèque Nationale, lat. 16307; and Raigern, F/K 1 a 1.

The ordering of the responsories of the second Sunday appears in only two other manuscripts: Manuscript 346¹⁰² (Münster, Staatsarchiv, Altertumsverein Münster, 97¹⁰³ that originated in Münster) and Manuscript 529¹⁰⁴ (Strasbourg, 62, from Cologne). Based on the data that Hesbert has processed, this particular ordering is thus unique to the diocese of Münster and the archdiocese of Cologne, within which Münster falls. Further detailed comparative studies of the content of manuscripts written for use in Münster and Cologne are required in order to investigate the ramifications of this relationship.¹⁰⁵

3 The responsories for Christmas

3.1 The sources

The following representative sources from the diocese of Münster have been selected for this comparative study:

- Antiphonale Monasteriense (1537)
- D-MÜsa Msc. 433 (ca. 1350)¹⁰⁶
- D-MÜp K¹ 146 (1546)¹⁰⁷
- D-MÜd PfA Hs. 113 (ca. 1450)¹⁰⁸

¹⁰² Hesbert, Corpus Antiphonalium Officii, vol. 5, 11.

¹⁰³ This breviary was probably written for a canon of the Münster Cathedral and its content closely resembles that of the Antiphonale Monasteriense.

¹⁰⁴ Hesbert, Corpus Antiphonalium Officii, vol. 5, 16.

¹⁰⁵ Another aspect that requires further investigation concerns the verse texts of the responsories. See, for example, De Loos, "The transmission of the 'Responsoria Prolixa' according to the manuscripts of St Mary's Church, Utrecht", 5-31, which considers variants among the verses of responsories that have the same response texts.

¹⁰⁶ Münster, Nordrhein-Westfälisches Staatsarchiv, Altertumsverein Msc. 433. Many of the references to this late fourteenth-century antiphoner, pre-dating the appearance of Hinz's 1999 catalogue, identify it as Ms. 433 in the Westfälisches Landesmuseum für Kunst und Kulturgeschichte. 3.2 Criteria for variance

The work of David Hughes provides a useful point of departure for establishing a methodology for the consideration of variants in this part of the study. The first important observation that he makes is that variants tend to be grouped in geographic patterns.¹¹³ Although he does not make this clear, one can assume that he is referring to large geographical areas and that one would expect manuscripts from the diocese of Münster to show a fair degree of similarity. Nevertheless, one can argue that the grouping of such geographic variants could also occur on a smaller scale, with manuscripts reflecting variants that are unique to exemplars originating from a particular parish or town. An example of this type of variance appears in the melodies for the versified office for St Liudger, an office that is specific to the diocese of Münster. Although all of the manuscripts that contain the music for the complete office have the same melodies, the two antiphoners that were copied for use in Nottuln (PfA 113 and 114) reveal a number of melodic variants that are unique to them.¹¹⁴ It is thus evident that if the later Nottuln manuscript is not a direct copy of the earlier one (as Ossing believes), both reflect, in the words of Hughes, a “regional uniformity of musical practice” that is, among the manuscripts from the diocese of Münster, particular to Nottuln.

Secondly, how does one determine whether a variant is trivial or substantial? According to Hughes a “trivial variant is a minor change that would likely pass by unnoticed, making little or no musical difference”, while a “substantive one creates a perceptibly new version of the melody.” More significantly, he concludes that “the vast majority of variants to be found are trivial”.¹¹⁵

Hughes’s study also shows that substantive variants are the ones that are most likely to be geographically distributed. This implies that a study, such as this one, which is concerned with a group of manuscripts originating from the same geographical area, would to a large extent display only trivial or minor variants and that, in an attempt to group the sources on the basis of variants, the point of departure would be one that proceeds from all variants regardless of their status as trivial or substantive. A trivial variant, even one that is the result of a blatant scribal error, can in fact become relevant if it appears in several sources that exhibit other similarities.

The one type of variance that Hughes does not explicitly take into account, but alludes to by listing sources that use an ornamental or liquescent neume instead of a “normal” neume (or vice versa) in another source as part of his classification of variants,¹¹⁶ is semiotic variance. For the purposes of this study, semiotic variance is a term that is applied to any type of notational variance in which one neumatic sign is replaced by an equivalent sign that simply implies a vocal nuance and not a change or the repetition of a pitch.

The following list provides the criteria according to which variant readings will be identified in this chapter:

- 1) The text syllable is the basic unit of comparison.
- 2) Semiotic variance:
 - a) the interchange of a virga and a punctum over single- and multiple-pitch syllables;
 - b) the interchange of an apostrophic sign and a virga/punctum over single- and multiple-pitch syllables;
 - c) the interchange of a quilisma and a “normal” sign; and
 - d) the interchange of liquescence and a “normal” sign.
- 3) Pitch variance:
 - a) the addition or subtraction of repeated pitches;
 - b) all other instances, including the redistribution of pitches among syllables, where the pitches remain the same, but the text underlay is different.

3.3 Editorial principles

3.3.1 The melodies

The font used in the transcriptions is the GuidoEN font developed at the Department of Early Music of the Institute of Musicology of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. This is a modernized Messine-Gothic notation that is ideally suited to Hufnagelschrift. It allows one to create a diplomatic edition in a style of modern notation that reads easily and which presents a very accurate rendition of the original notation, including the distinction between the virga and punctum, renditions of ornamental signs, and the grouping of neumes in long melismas. Readers who are familiar with Gothic notation should not have any difficulty in “back-translating” the modern transcriptions presented in this and the following chapter into the original. Since the signs for clefs, quilisma and liquescence tend to be problematic, some details about the conventions related to their transcription are presented below.

Clefs

GuidoEN does not include a sign for the vocal tenor G clef normally used for the transcription of plainchant melodies in modern notation on a five-line staff. In the transcriptions the figure 8 appearing below the G clef should be “understood”. All pitches following the treble G clef should thus be read an octave down:

In some of the transcriptions wide ranges call for the use of clef changes. These clefs should be read, untransposed, at their actual pitch:

Quilisma

The following conventions are used for the transcription of neumes that include a quilisma:

1. a quilisma sign appearing a third below the following neumatic element:

2. a quilisma sign appearing a second below the following neumatic element:

In PfA 114, the quilisma is replaced by two apostrophic puncta. Although one could argue that this is simply the way in which the scribe notated the quilisma, the rather consistent use of a sign resembling two inverted apostrophic puncta or two diamond-shaped puncta for the quilisma in the other manuscripts suggests that the scribe of PfA 114 had other intentions.

Liquescence

In some of the manuscripts the presence of liquescence is unambiguous. More often than not, however, it is difficult to discern whether the scribe intended a liquescent sign or an apostrophic neume. There are several cases where it is not clear, for example, whether the liquescent cephalicus should be read as a repercussive virga strophica, or whether the liquescent torculus should rather be read as a torculus strophicus.

Mocquereau's¹¹⁷ study of liquescence has been used to establish guidelines for liquescence in the transcriptions. He divides the use of the liquescence into a series of facts:

- 1) Liquescent signs are never encountered on syllables ending with a vowel, vowel sounds, or in the middle of a purely vocal figure.
- 2) All liquescent signs either appear at the end of a melodic group, or help with the transition to a new syllable.
- 3) Liquescent signs only appear on syllables and words that comply with the following phonetic conditions:
 - a) in front of certain combinations of two or three consonants, which include the following:
 - i) the combination of two consonants, of which the first must be one of the liquid consonants: l, r, m, n;
 - ii) the combination of two consonants, of which the first must be a dental explosive consonant: t, d;
 - iii) the combination of two consonants, of which the first is the consonant s;
 - iv) the combination of the two consonants gn together in one word, i.e. magnus; and
 - v) the combination of two consonants, of which one is the letter d, m, n, r, t, b, s and l, followed by a j, i.e. senior juste.
 - b) The two consonants m and g determine the liquescent sign, but only between two vowels. The m after a vowel naturally produces a sort of mute sound. Mocquereau found 46 liquescent signs on the letter m on words such as the following: semitas, etenim universi, or altissimi. He also found that with the letter g this rule was only applicable when the letter appeared in a word before the vowels e and i, for example, regi, confugient and legem.

- c) The diphthong au also provides the occasion for the use of a liquescent sign. In Latin there are eight diphthongs: ai, ei, oi, ae, oe, au, eu and ou. Mocquereau states that four of these diphthongs fell into disuse before the Christian era. These are ai, ei, oi and ou. The pronunciation of ae and oe also changed from a diphthong sound to a simple e sound. He states that the diphthong eu is pronounced more like a u and is not often used in Latin texts. The cause of a liquescent sign found on this diphthong is rather the letter g that normally follows eu. However, Mocquereau did find 160 liquescent signs on the remaining diphthong au. His reasoning for this is that, even today, in modern European languages such as French or Italian this diphthong is produced as two sounds, the second sound forming a mute sound, much like the m consonant. This sound is one of the most common phonetic places to use the liquescent sign.
 - d) The letter j between two vowels. This rule also includes the letter i, for example, in words like ejus or cujus, which is sometimes spelled eius or cuius.
- 4) The use of liquescent signs at the above-mentioned phonetic places is not compulsory. According to Mocquereau, it is impossible to lay down definite rules about the use of liquescent signs, since he has found some cases in the St Gall Manuscripts where one of the four 'facts' above were present without the use of a liquescent sign.

Betteray¹¹⁸ writes that Wagner,¹¹⁹ Suñol,¹²⁰ and Apel¹²¹ all agree with Mocquereau's theories about the liquescent sign, while Freistedt¹²² does not agree with his interpretation of the liquescent signs on the consonants d and t.

The following examples illustrate the use of the liquescent signs in the different manuscripts of this study. There are no signs for liquescence in the Antiphonale Monasteriense and K¹ 146. A represents examples of signs that could be interpreted as liquescence, while B

3.4 Methodology of the comparative study

In the comparative study, the following symbols identify the respective sources:

As mentioned at the outset of this chapter, the aim is to determine the relationship between these sources and the Freckenhorst Antiphoner. A very basic comparative method is utilized: the basic unit of comparison is the text syllable and the source which exhibits the largest amount of syllables that are in agreement with Freckenhorst is identified as the closest match. The response and verse of each responsory are considered separately in the syllable count. The Gloria patri verses and the long additional melismas for fabrice mundi (R I) and veritate

The results of the comparison are presented in the tables below:

- The symbol for each manuscript appears under the heading Src (Source).
- In the case of F, the Syl columns contains the number of syllables in PfA 53 with pitch variance in the other sources, based on the criteria for semiotic and pitch variance described above. In the transcriptions these variants appear in blue.
- Values for the other sources in the Syl column record the number of variant syllables that are in agreement with PfA 53, again based on the criteria for semiotic and pitch variance (the highest value in this column signifies the closest match). In the transcriptions, variants that agree with PfA 53 appear in blue, while those that do not are in red.
- The value in the O column represents the amount of pitch variants according to Ossing's criteria. A low value here indicates a close match.
- The value in the T column indicates the number of syllables that forms part of textual variants that are disregarded in the previous columns (see the addition of gloriam ejus at the conclusion of R-I in N1 and N2). The notation above these textual variants in the transcriptions is in green. Since the long additional melismas for "Descendit de caelis missus ab" and "Verbum caro factum est et" are excluded from the comparative results, these also appear in green.
- A tick in the Cl column identifies the closest match to PfA 53 according to the semiotic and pitch criteria described above.
- A tick in the CO column identifies the closest match to PfA 53 according to Ossing's criteria.

If one considers the sum of the totals of the responses and the verses for the Christmas vigil, the two sets of comparative criteria yield different results: O (PfA 132) and N1 (PfA 113) for CL and CO, respectively. In the case of the responsories for Christmas itself, the results are comparable: O (PfA 132), and O together with Nb (PfA 91) for CL and CO, respectively. However, if one considers the predominance of O, in these results, the antiphoner from Olfen (PfA 132) is the closest match for PfA 53.

Chapter 3

The Versified Offices in PfA 53

1 Terminology and origins

A newly composed type of liturgical office appeared between the ninth and sixteenth centuries. Many sources call this particular office a 'rhymed office', although this is definitely not a universally accepted term for the entire repertory of newly written offices. The new offices were required for newly established feasts and were composed to venerate local saints, as well as to commemorate existing and new relics.¹²⁵ These relics did not necessarily have to be people or body parts – offices, for example, were composed to venerate the Holy Cross. Other feasts were composed to honour various occasions connected with the Blessed Virgin.¹²⁶

It is difficult to define and name this group of offices. In his Western plainchant, Hiley does not use a specific term for these offices, but refers to them as 'offices with verse texts'. He argues that the term, 'rhymed office' cannot be used to classify the whole field, because "rhyme is only one aspect of poetic technique which can be found in the offices".¹²⁷

The earliest of these offices, composed in the late ninth and early tenth centuries, were often written in a mixture of classical hexameters, rhythmical stanzas and stanzas in rhymed and pure prose. Eventually, a transition was made to offices that consisted entirely of rhymed prose, such as the office for Ulrich, composed by Berno of Reichenau (d. 1048). By the late twelfth century, many offices were written in accentual rhythmic verse and poetic form. The office for Thomas of Canterbury, probably written after his death in 1170, is a good example of this new type of poetic office. Fully rhymed offices in poetic form were common by the twelfth century. The advent of the poetic office in the twelfth century did not mean that texts were no longer written in prose and classical accentual meters, since offices containing a mixture of poetic structure and prose forms still appeared. Blume remarks that in "the Middle Ages the word 'rhythmical' was used as the general term for any kind of poetry to be distinguished from prose, no matter whether there was regular rhythm in those poems or not.¹²⁸

The following are typical features of the later rhymed office:¹²⁹

- regular poetry;
- responsory verses differ poetically from the response;
- the presence of occasional other prose items;
- an emphasis on words and word painting in the late fifteenth century.

The process that led to the exclusive use of accentual rhyming poetry reflects similar developments in other newly composed liturgical genres, such as the conductus, alleluia, sequence and the liturgical drama. The use of poetic texts did not bring about a new liturgical or musical form. It was rather a case of stylistic change.¹³⁰

The composition of versified offices was encouraged in France, and Southern and Western Germany, but was not favoured in Italy.¹³¹ Local geography, therefore, plays an important role in the distribution of rhymed offices. German and Austrian books contain a large amount of rhymed offices; French and English books less; and Italian and Spanish books often only contain one or two rhymed offices, which would normally include a very important universal office as well as an office for the local saint.¹³²

According to Hughes, it is safe to assume that the churchman mentioned in connection with an office was normally the composer of both the text and the chant, and sometimes of the saint's vita as well.¹³³ In the rhymed repertory, some of the later offices appear to be adaptations and/or based on models of earlier offices.

The rhymed repertory flourished from around 1100 to the 1580s. The use of the medieval rhymed offices was discontinued after the Council of Trent (1545-1563) and the introduction of the new Brevarium Romanum in 1568.¹³⁴ Single rhymed offices still appeared in the Franciscan and Dominican Brevaries after the Council of Trent.¹³⁵

It is interesting to see how the terminology concerning this office has evolved. In the Riemann Musiklexicon, published in 1967, the term Reimoffizien is used.¹³⁶ Ossing, published in 1966, also uses this term.¹³⁷ For the first edition of the dictionary, Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart, published in 1963, Irtenkauf¹³⁸ wrote an article about these offices, also under the title Reimoffizien. However, in the second edition of the same source, published in 1998, there is no proper entry for Reimoffizien. According to the index, some information about this term features in two entries, namely the entry for the general Offizium, and that of the Responsorium.¹³⁹

In the first edition of the New Grove dictionary of music and musicians, published in 1980, the article about these offices appears under the heading 'Rhymed Office'.¹⁴⁰ In the more recent Grove Music Online, a search on the term 'rhymed office' leads to a cross-reference for the main article under the heading 'Versified Office'.¹⁴¹ In her contribution to this article Jacobsson remarks that the term 'rhymed office' came into use with the publication of Analecta hymnica medii aevi (1886-1922). She also observes that this type of office is a "subcategory of versified offices, which itself is a subcategory of historia".¹⁴²

It seems as if scholars became more critical about the use of the term rhymed office in the 1990s. It was problematic that offices that were not strictly in rhyme, but also in verse or prose, were included in the group 'rhymed office'. Scholars then started to search for a term that could include both offices in verse and rhyme. After the 1990s, many scholars started using the term versified office.

This study uses the term versified office, except in cases where another author is cited, in which case the term used by that author will be used.

2 The Texts

Jacobsson¹⁴³ writes that the term *historia*¹⁴⁴ “denotes a coherent series” of texts. The texts of the responsories (and occasionally the texts of the antiphons) follow the line of a story. Originally, these texts were taken from books of the Bible, other than the Psalms.¹⁴⁵ At a later stage, newly written offices for saints¹⁴⁶ used non-biblical sources, such as the vita of a saint, as a source for the texts of the responsories and antiphons. Some of these sources might have been versified texts. Normally a coherent narrative was followed within these offices.¹⁴⁷ The texts of the versified office are often formulaic in nature and repetition is common. A common feature is that the same text for the invitatory is be used for a number of saints, with only the name of the saint changed to suit the office.¹⁴⁸

Hughes describes the rhymed office as an office containing metrical, rhythmical and rhymed text for hymns, antiphons and responsories in a closed form. Sometimes new music and texts were composed only for certain chants, sometimes for the whole office. The customary use for these new offices were to relate the historia (the life and miracles performed by the saint) of the concerned saint. In the beginning these historia were written in prose. Hughes adds that the vita of the saint was normally of local importance (which is an important feature of later offices).¹⁴⁹ He also remarks, that like any other narration, this biography did not need to

¹⁴⁴ The term historia was first used by Amalarius of Metz. Although a coherent narrative is often followed within offices of this kind, this was not a written rule to obey at all times. See Jacobsson & Haug, “Versified Offices”, Grove music online, ed. by Laura Macy, <http://www.grovemusic.com>. Stevens in Words and music in the Middle Ages, 251, comments that a rhymed office is, in fact, a double historia. He reasons that the lessons, which are in prose, recount the life of the saint. Interspaced between the lessons are the antiphons and the responsories, which account the same saint’s life again, only now in verse.

¹⁴⁵ Epstein in “Lodovicus Decus Regnantium: Perspective on the Rhymed Office”, 283-334, notes that an important feature, which differentiates the rhymed office from previous liturgical offices, is that in the rhymed office, newly composed poetic texts were used, compared to earlier liturgical offices that used prose texts for the antiphons and responsories, which were extracted from the Bible, or other scriptural sources. These poetic texts were often “new” poems based on an already existing text, such as the vita of a saint. These texts are more a poetic adaptation of already existing, non-biblical sources.

¹⁴⁶ New offices were continually written for well-known saints or the patronage saint of the town. Again, the influence of the local town, village or parish is clear in all of these new compositions, as many strived to place themselves under the patronage of a certain saint, or even gain importance with the discovery of a certain relic. The role of religious orders, such as the Dominicans or the Franciscans, should not be underestimated in the diffusion and circulation of these types of offices. See Jacobsson & Haug, “Versified Offices”, Grove music online, ed. by Laura Macy, <http://www.grovemusic.com>.

be in chronological order.¹⁵⁰ The dialogue in the versicle and the response that introduce the offices and the lessons are rhymed but are separated from the antiphons both musically and textually. It is not always clear to what extent the antiphons were drawn from the vita and it is even less clear in the case of the hymns.¹⁵¹ Items were sometimes chosen for their content and not always because of their form.¹⁵²

When composers started using this new form, they frequently borrowed the text from an older office concerning another saint, and just changed the name to that of the saint they were honouring in the new office.¹⁵³ Hankeln notes that with a rhymed office the writer normally took excerpts from any of the available vita of the concerned saint to use for the lessons and chants.¹⁵⁴

3 Musical characteristics of the versified offices

The newly composed offices feature a musical style that departs from the traditional Gregorian style in a number of ways. The range of the melody increases so that it sometimes encompasses a twelfth or more; both plagal and authentic versions of the mode are used; and the melody moves in the same direction for longer to give a sense of direction.¹⁵⁵ Motives and/or melodies were sometimes repeated in their entirety. One of the most important characteristics of the office is that the chants tend to make use of a very wide range. The chant's melodic range encompasses the fifth above the finalis, the fourth below the finalis (plagal), and the octave above (authentic) as melodic goals (or, as Hiley puts it, "as pillars on which to hang the free-flowing melismatic lines").¹⁵⁶ Another feature is the frequent leaps not only between the finalis and the upper fifth, but also between the upper fifth and the upper octave. The finalis is naturally important as a cadence point, but the other cadence notes normally used in 'traditional chants' are neglected.¹⁵⁷

¹⁵⁷ Hiley, "The Historia Sancti Magni by Hermannus Contractus", 378.

Hughes remarks that in many of the later offices “the melodies ... were borrowed, complete or in part, from earlier widely distributed offices”.¹⁵⁸ Thus, composers were given the opportunity to practise not only new composition methods, but also adaptation methods through the composition of the rhymed office. There was “a great deal of melodic borrowing”, but the textual and musical borrowings did not always coincide.¹⁵⁹ It is not always possible to make a distinction between the style of the chants of the versified offices and those of prose offices. It was not required of composers to move away from the old musical style. Thus, similarities between the chants of a versified office and that of a prose office can sometimes be the result of a commonly used traditional melodic type and cannot always be attributed to borrowing.¹⁶⁰

Melodies from the standard repertory were sometimes re-used. Some of these standard melodies were slightly adjusted to accommodate new word groupings; others were linked with new, original motifs to form an original melody.¹⁶¹ Hughes states that the foundation of new orders in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries made the offices with texts in accentual poetry very popular. Because of this popularity, many of the later office melodies are contrafacta of some of the melodies of the earlier offices.¹⁶² It is possible now, not only to group some of these offices according to composer and geography, but more importantly, by ecclesiastical order.¹⁶³

One characteristic of the chants of the versified office (these characteristics are not always exclusive to the versified offices) is that the modes of the chants tend to follow a numerical order.¹⁶⁴ The practice of arranging the chants in serial modal order, with a return to the first mode after the eighth chant, started in the 9th century and soon became normal practice.¹⁶⁵

¹⁶³ Hughes, “Late medieval plainchant for the divine office”, 57.

¹⁶⁴ Hoppin in “Cypriot Plainchant”, 31, quotes Wagner on the origin of the use of modal order in chants. According to Wagner, the use of the chants with modes in numerical order can be traced back to the Trinity office composed in the tenth century. It is his conclusion that from that point onwards, this numerical order was always used when new offices were being composed. In his opinion, “no liturgical or artistic purpose for such modal ordering can be adduced”. In contrast, Hiley, in “Style and structure in early offices”, 161, believes that the move to compose pieces in numerical order was very limited before the eleventh century.

¹⁶⁵ Hughes in “Rhymed office”, 804, speculates that this practice may have started with the first composers of rhymed offices, such as Stephen of Liège.

Each antiphon¹⁶⁶ is in a different modal tone: the first antiphon is written in the first mode (protus authentic mode on D) through to mode 8 (tertradius plagal mode on G). The ninth antiphon then starts in the first mode again. The responsories follow the same pattern. Hymns do not follow the order of the modal cycles and, according to Hughes, that excludes them from the rhymed office.¹⁶⁷ Invitatories also feature only in a few of the available modes. This is a feature of later offices too. Although the modal choice of the invitatory may seem to exclude it from the rhymed office, its textual character (single-stanza poem) includes it in the office. The nature of the invitatory is normally formal and general, and does not fit into the “narrative and biographical sequence of the other texts”.¹⁶⁸

A number of specific musical characteristics allow one to establish whether a chant belongs to the early medieval layer of the traditional Gregorian repertory or the late medieval layer to which the versified offices belong:¹⁶⁹

- i) the use of the subtonal, so-called Gallican, cadence (for example, CD-D);
- ii) leaps larger than an interval of a fourth, in both directions, within syllables and/or between syllables and/or between words, which includes the movement from one phrase to the next;
- iii) specific combinations of interval leaps:
 - a) three concessive melodic leaps in different directions and at most interrupted by an interval of a second,
 - b) two leaps in the same direction;
- iv) scale fragments covering the range of a fifth or a sixth, or just a preference for an overall scalar motion;

¹⁶⁶ Hughes in “Modal order and disorder in the rhymed office”, 48, remarks that the tonal ordering within the chants and offices are reflected more strongly “where the trend is towards a strengthening or renewing, even simplification of the modal system”.

- v) many phrases beginning and ending on the finalis, the octave above the finalis, the fifth above the finalis or the fourth below the finalis (depending on whether the mode is plagal or authentic);
- vi) many words ending on the finalis, the octave above the finalis, the fifth above the finalis or the fourth below the finalis (depending on whether the mode is plagal or authentic);
- vii) melodic phrase repetitions;¹⁷⁰
- viii) the use of a wide range, sometimes covering the ranges of both the authentic and plagal versions of a particular mode;
- ix) short, self-contained melodic phrases consisting of no more than one word, or four to six syllables;
- x) the use of well-developed melismas;
- xi) limited or no use of the Frère themes;
- xii) chains of thirds in sequence;
- xiii) oscillations, for example: GaGaGa or FGFGFG;
- xiv) serial modal ordering;
- xv) the absence of the traditional responsory verse tones.

The following examples from the versified offices for St Gertrude, St Boniface and St Achacius in PFA 53 serve as material to illustrate some of these non-traditional musical characteristics.

St Gertrudis: Responsorium XI Gloriosa virgo Christi

I

¹⁷⁰ Hiley in "The Office of the Transfiguration by Peter the Venerable", 232, notes that "to repeat a phrase would have been unthinkable in the old style".

F ad re- gis re- gum ac-cer- si- tur pa-la- ti- um.

F U- bi ob perfec- te vir- tu- tis de- cur- sum

V. Ange-lo- rum comi- ta- tu po- ti- tur

F at- que cum digno tri- pu- di- o

F pa- ra- di- sum in- tro- fer- tur. U(bi).

The office follows the serial modal order. The ninth responsory of the Gertrude Office displays a number of non-traditional characteristics. The first characteristic, which is the easiest to spot, is the subtonal cadence, on CD-D (palatium, bravium). Most phrases conclude on the finalis. Most words conclude on the finalis, the fourth below the finalis and the fifth above the finalis. There are leaps of intervals of a fifth (optatum), which also features in the melisma on corona. The melody has a wide range, covering the range of both the authentic and plagal versions of mode 1 (A-d). The long melisma consists of short, self-contained, repetitive smaller phrase segments which emphasize the finalis, as well as the fifth and octave above the finalis.

The verse does not make use of the traditional mode 1 responsory verse tone. It begins and ends on the finalis D, whereas the traditional verse tone begins on a and ends on F. There is also no indication of the recitational character of the traditional verse tone. Another characteristic that should be noted is the wide ranges of the verse melody (C-d).

This office also follows the serial modal order. There are not as many subtonal cadences in this responsory as in the previous example. There are, however, more leaps in this chant: examples of three or more consecutive leaps in different directions, and at most interrupted by an interval of a second is Christi (D-a-c-G) and simustuti (E-G-C-E-F-D). Vestris (e-c-a-F) is an example of concessive leaps in the same direction. The melodic contours again play out over a wide range of pitches. The response has the range of a tenth, extending above and below the theoretical octave range of mode 1 (C-e), while the verse covers a ninth, from the subfinal to the octave above the finalis (C-d). Most of the phrases open and conclude with the finalis and the fifth above the finalis. Most of the words end on the finalis and the fifth above the finalis. The chant is based on recurring melodic fragments: iniquitatis = protectionibus = persecutoribus; persecuti = simustuti = semper. The musical rhyme reflects the textual rhyme:

| Text | Textual rhyme | Musical rhyme |
|-------------------------|---------------|---------------|
| Sancti Christi martires | a | m |
| Iniquitatis milites | a | m |
| Quos sunt persecuti | b | n |
| Vestris protectionibus | c | o |
| A persecutoribus | c | o |
| Semper simus tuti | b | n |

Table 24: Rhyme in St Achatio, Responsory IX

The use of melismas on word syllables is also a noticeable feature.

The responsory verse tone does not even remotely resemble the traditional responsory verse tone. The frequent interval leaps of a fifth are noticeable, as well as the subtonal cadences (petitionis). The melisma on the first syllable of absoluti has a host of characteristics, for example, leaps over a wide range in different directions (the motion of E up to G and then down to D) and a leap of a fifth (a-D). The use of consecutive leaps, as well as a leap over the interval of a fifth, is a non-traditional characteristic (promissionis). As with the previous example, the final cadence is not similar to that of the traditional responsory verse tone.

St Bonifatius: Responsorium XI Domine Ihesu Christe

R. Do- mi-ne Ihe- su Chris- te redemptor et salva- tor

nos- ter fac nos se- qui ves- ti- gi- a pa- tris nostri

Bo- ni-fa- ti- i. Ut cum eo su-perne he- re- di- ta- tis par- tem possi- de- re me- re a- mur in e- ter- num.

The serial modal order is not followed. The modal order is followed up to the seventh responsory. Responsory seven is in mode 7, but responsory eight is written in mode 5 transposed, while responsory nine is again written in mode 7. All the antiphons follow the modal order.

The wide range of the melody is remarkable in this chant, covering both the range of the authentic and plagal versions of mode 7 (D-g). The consecutive third interval leaps in the first line are also immediately noticeable (Domine, Ihesu, redemptor). Subtonal cadences are also present on FG-G (Christe, Bonifatii) and CD-D (sequi, possidere). The numerous leaps of a fifth interval between syllables as well as words (fac-nos, qui-vestigia, Bonifatii-Ut, superne, partem-possidere), and the recurrence of melodic segments (for example, fac nos sequi = possidere) are characteristic of non-traditional rhymed office chants. The phrases mostly open and conclude with the finalis, the fifth above the finalis and the octave above the finalis. The words mostly end on the finalis, the fifth above the finalis and the octave above the finalis.

The verse starts on the same pitch, d, as the traditional responsory verse tone, and a few of the melodic fragments are drawn to the high d, which is the reciting tone for the traditional responsory verse tone, but that is how far the similarities go. The subtonal cadence is present (quesumus), as well as leaps over intervals of a fifth (for example, interventionem tuere). The verse tone also covers a wide range, D-g, covering both the authentic and plagal versions of mode 7.

4 The versified offices for Sts Gertrude, Boniface and Achacius

4.1 Introduction

Ossing provides two lists of versified offices from the diocese of Münster. The first is a general list of versified offices that appear in one or more Münster sources (including the Antiphonale Monasteriense), while the second contains offices that do not appear in the Antiphonale Monasteriense.¹⁷¹

The rhymed offices that appear in PfA 53 are:

- Trinity Sunday (fol. 132v)
- Conversion of Paul (fol. 205v)
- Gertrude of Nivelles (fol. 221v)
- Liudger, Bishop of Münster (fol. 229r)
- Boniface (fol. 237r) (incomplete)
- Achacius and his 10 000 companions (fol. 243r)
- Sending forth of the Apostles (fol. 260r)
- Anne, mother of Mary (fol. 267r)
- Finding of Stephen, first martyr (fol. 270r)

The selection of the three versified offices transcribed in this dissertation is based upon texts that have a limited dissemination, not only in the Münster sources, but also in books from other geographical regions.¹⁷² The purpose of the material that follows is to lay the basis for a more complete edition of these relatively unknown historiae that could be included in the Historia series of The Institute of Mediaeval Music in Ottawa at a later stage.

4.2 The versified office for St Gertrude of Nivelles

4.2.1 The legend of Gertrude of Nivelles

Saint Gertrude of Nivelles (626-March 17, 659)¹⁷³ was the youngest daughter of Pippin (also, Pepin the Elder, ca. 580-640) of Landen, the home of the family, west of Tongres and northeast of Nivelles.¹⁷⁴ Pippin was the leader of the east Frankish nobility, as well as the founder of the Carolingian dynasty.¹⁷⁵ Her mother was the Lady Itta (also Ida or Iduberga, d.

¹⁷³ Livingstone, The Oxford dictionary of the Christian Church, 670. Her feast day is March 17. Other feast days include the following: the feast day for when she joined the convent (2 December), and the movement of her relics (10 April and 30 May). See Baudot & Chaussin, Vies des saints et des bienheureux, 383.

652).¹⁷⁶ Pippin was an important man: four years before the birth of his youngest daughter he was “instrumental in persuading Clothar II to crown his son, Dagobert I, as King of Austrasia. The new king appointed Pippin as mayor of the palace ...”. Pippin was very popular amongst the nobility of the kingdom, and in being so, might have aroused the suspicion of the new king who wanted to keep him close.¹⁷⁷

Gertrude would have been a very important pawn to be used by the king in a political marriage. However, Gertrude refused the king’s candidate for her hand. One of the possible reasons for this might be because the king wanted to replace her father with this man, the son of the Duke of Austrasia.¹⁷⁸

From a young age, she showed determination to enter into a religious life. This notion had her mother's support. After Pippin’s death, Gertrude and Itta turned to the religious life, and both took up the veil. Itta founded the convent at Nivelles on family land,¹⁷⁹ probably on advice from the bishop Amandus.¹⁸⁰ Political reasons might also have driven this decision. In constructing this convent, Itta secured their family fortune, and kept it away from greedy royal hands.¹⁸¹

At the age of twenty, Gertrude became the first abbess of the convent where she received many pilgrims and travellers, giving them shelter and food.¹⁸² She used her financial resources to procure sacred books from Rome and elsewhere in order to teach her nuns hymns and Scripture, “of which she was so fond that she is said to have learnt nearly the whole of the Bible by heart in the course of her life”.¹⁸³

She also gave an estate near Fosse, which belonged to her and her mother, to Irish monks,¹⁸⁴ amongst whom was St Ultan, so that they could have a haven to travel to, and a place where pilgrims could find rest when they travelled that way.

¹⁸⁴ According to Brouette, in The new Catholic encyclopaedia, vol. 6, 191-2, Gertrude was a defender of Irish monasticism. The double monastery of Nivelles was run according to Celtic tradition, where the nuns and the monks were under the rule of an abbess.

After her mother's death, Gertrude chose from her following of monks and nuns those who would help her in the daily running of the convent, in order for her to have more time to devote to the study and reading of the Holy Scriptures, and for prayer.¹⁸⁵ Unfortunately, the burden became too much for her. In her diligence, she ill-treated her body, fasting constantly and refraining from sleeping.¹⁸⁶ After her thirtieth birthday, she bestowed the role of abbess upon her niece, Wulfetrude, who was then twenty years of age.¹⁸⁷

During the last three years of her life, she lived in constant devotion and increased her disciplines. At the end of her life, according to her biographer, she grew afraid, because she felt unworthy, and sent a messenger to St Ultan to ask whether he had had a vision concerning her impending death. He replied that "she would die the following day during Mass" and that she had nothing to fear because "St Patrick with many angels and saints was waiting to receive her soul".¹⁸⁸

Regarded as a holy person during her life, she was worshipped as a saint immediately after her death.¹⁸⁹ Her cult is very strong in the Low Countries¹⁹⁰ and it has spread to England as well. In art works¹⁹¹ she is depicted with mice and rats at her feet, or running up her dress or pastoral staff – she is invoked against plagues of mice and rats.¹⁹² She is also the patron saint of travellers and pilgrims. As an extension of this patronage, she also protects the recently dead. According to myth, these souls have to undertake a three-day journey to the next world, and on their first night, they rest under the protection of St Gertrude.¹⁹³ She is also the patron saint of gardeners.¹⁹⁴ Several towns in the Netherlands are under her patronage, and she is invoked against fever as well.¹⁹⁵

4.2.2 Sources for the versified office for St Gertrude of Nivelles

Among the manuscripts from the diocese of Münster, the versified office for St Gertrude of Nivelles only appears in PfA 53.¹⁹⁶ Within Germany, the only other source that contains parallel texts for St Gertrude is D-MÜd PfA Hs 202,¹⁹⁷ an antiphoner from Kalkar (in the district of Kleve in Nordrhein-Westfalia). Ossing probably excluded this document from his study, since Kalkar, which is in the diocese Münster today, did not originally form part of this bishopric.¹⁹⁸ It is a relatively late manuscript, dating from ca. 1588, and its melodies for the Gertrude Office are completely different from those of PfA 53.

The office is listed in LMLO.¹⁹⁹ The edition of the text in *Analecta hymnica*²⁰⁰ is based on a single source, from the fifteenth century, which is in the Austrian National Library in Vienna today, A-Wn Cod. 4715.²⁰¹ This manuscript contains the texts, without notation, for the antiphons, responsories and lessons of the feast.

The Cantus website²⁰² contains two antiphoner manuscripts from the Onze Lieve Vrouwekerk (The Church of Our Lady) in Tongeren (Belgium), containing the plainchant texts and melodies of this particular versified office for St Gertrude, B-TO 63 and B-TO 64.²⁰³ There are minor variants between the two Tongeren manuscripts and some more substantial variants between these two sources and PfA 53, the latter appearing mainly in the responsories. This is an indication that the Tongeren and Freckenhorst manuscripts were copied from different exemplars, especially if one considers that the texts in B-TO 63, B-TO 64 and PfA 202 are closer to the version in Cod. 4715 than those in PfA 53.

De Loos's website lists another manuscript which is housed in the Bibliothèque royale de Belgique in Brussels, the breviary B-Br 4655²⁰⁴ of the Pieterskerk (St Peter's Church) in Leuven. It contains the texts for the antiphons, responsories, a collect and a hymn, but no lessons.

Although the feast appears in the Münster calendar,²⁰⁵ it seems that in most of the dioceses it was a simple nine-lesson feast with the liturgy taken from the Common of Virgins, except for the lessons and perhaps the hymn and Magnificat antiphon. This is the form in which the feast appears in Münster breviaries, for example the late fifteenth-century D-MÜsa Msc. 97,²⁰⁶ and the copy of the printed 1518 edition in the Bistumsarchiv at Münster.²⁰⁷

The following table provides a list with details about provenance, the content, and the sources for the versified office for St Gertrude:

| Manuscript | Origin | Content |
|-------------|--------------|--|
| PfA 53 | Freckenhorst | Antiphons and responsories with notation |
| Cod. 4715 | ? | Full office, with 6 lessons, text only |
| PfA 202 | Kalkar | Antiphons, responsories and hymns with notation and different melodies |

| Ms. 4655 | Leuven | Full office, without lessons, text only |

Table 25: Sources with the versified office for St Gertrude of Nivelles

PfA 53, B-TO 63 and B-TO 64 follow a serial modal ordering. In the third Nocturn, the ninth antiphon is in mode 7, while the ninth responsory is in mode 1. The modal ordering of PfA 202 differs from that of PfA 53, B-TO 63 and B-TO 64. The responsories of the second and third Nocturn in PfA 202 deviate from the serial ordering: modes 6T, 5, 2, 2, 6T and 1. The antiphons follow a serial ordering; the ninth antiphon is in mode 5. Transcriptions of the versified office for St Gertrude of Nivelles in PfA 53, B-TO 63, B-TO 64 and PfA 202 appear on pp. 69-130 in volume two.

4.3 The versified office for St Boniface

4.3.1 The legend of Boniface, the Apostle of Germany

Boniface (ca. 675-5 June 755) was born in England of free Anglo-Saxon peasants. His birth name was Winfried. From an early age (some sources give the age as 5), he decided to follow a religious vocation. He was educated in monasteries, notably those at Exeter and then Nursling, where he was a private pupil of the abbot, Winbert.²⁰⁸ Here Winfried probably learnt about the Anglo-Saxon monastic ideals: "... love of learning, for Rome, and for missionary activity (peregrinatio pro Christo)".²⁰⁹ After completing his studies, he became director of the school. He was a popular teacher, and many came to the monastery to study under him. He is also the author of the first known book compiled on Latin grammar in England. His teachings were not restricted to those scholars who studied under him on a daily basis, but the churchgoers distributed his notes widely amongst themselves. He based all his studies on the Bible. He was ordained to priesthood after he had turned thirty.²¹⁰

Instead of staying in England, Winfried turned his attention to Europe where many people in central Europe were still practising pagan rites.²¹¹ In 716 he decided to go to Friesland to preach as a missionary, but had to return to England soon afterwards, because the political situation in the country was too volatile.²¹² His brothers at the cloister tried to keep him in England by electing him as abbot after the death of Winbert, but he refused – he felt his calling was elsewhere.²¹³

He felt that, for his mission to succeed, he needed to go to Rome and lay his mission before the Pope himself. Thus, in 718, he met Pope Gregory II in Rome, who ordered him to evangelise the “pagans in Germany”.²¹⁴ It was also Gregory II who gave Winfried the name of Boniface.²¹⁵

He first started his mission in Thuringia, but was not successful in his mission. When he received news of Ratbod’s (Friesland’s pagan leader) death, he decided to return to the site of his original mission. He worked in Friesland for three years, assisting the archbishop of Utrecht, Wilibrod. During that time, Wilibrod passed away. Declining to become his successor, Boniface went back to Thuringia, which at that point was under the jurisdiction of Karl Martel. He also expanded his mission northwards to include the territory of Hesse.²¹⁶

In 722, he went back to Rome to report his progress to Gregory II, who was so impressed by his success that Boniface was consecrated as regional bishop with general jurisdiction over Germany.²¹⁷ Boniface also received a letter from the Pope, and later another one from Karl Martel, who granted him immunity from both church and state, allowing him to move throughout the kingdom unharmed.

He established churches and monasteries wherever he could, notably at Ohrdruf and Fulda²¹⁸ (which he established in 744). He also enlisted the help of his English counterparts to send a labour force to the continent to help with his mission, since he realised that the people were willing to learn about Christianity. The only problem was that they lacked truthful and honest teachers to teach them.²¹⁹

In 731, Pope Gregory III, who authorized him to create new sees, made Boniface archbishop of Germany beyond the Rhine. He then went to Bavaria as papal legate where he established a hierarchy and several new sees.²²⁰ Meanwhile, the situation in France was dire. Many of the ecclesiastical offices were abused or simply sold to the highest bidder. Karl Martel, the mayor of the palace, who was an aide of Boniface, was mostly to blame for the damage to the church during this period. When he died in 741, his two sons, Pepin (Pepin III, called Pepin the Short) and Charles (called Carloman), were his successors. In the year of his father’s death, Charles called an assembly to deal with the problems the church was facing in his domain. Pepin also called a council of Gaul, over which he presided in 745. In 747, at the fifth Frankish council, Boniface was created primate of Germany as well as the papal legate for Germany and Gaul.²²¹

Soon after this event, Boniface lost one of his greatest supporters when Carloman decided to become a man of the cloth.²²² Pepin then became the ruler of the unified provinces. Although very different from his brother, Pepin still wanted to help Boniface, who had confessed in his letters that, without the help of the king, it would have been nearly impossible for him to “govern the people or exercise discipline over the clergy and monks, or check the practices of paganism”.²²³

In 754 Boniface resigned and left the diocese of Mainz in the care of St Lull. He was by now nearly eighty years of age, and wanted to spend the last of his remaining days in the Friesland, preaching to the faithful, and hopefully converting the pagans.²²⁴

Boniface died after having been attacked by pagans at the River Borne near Dokkum while he was preparing to baptise the converted. Although the recently converted wanted to protect him, he instructed them to trust in God and not be afraid to die for their faith.²²⁵ His body was taken to Fulda where he was buried.²²⁶ One of the most famous relics of Boniface is the book with which he supposedly protected his head during the attack. The book apparently shows marks of the pagans’ swords used during the attack and the stains on the wooden cover are reputed to be stains of his blood.²²⁷

He is called the Apostle of Germany, for his efforts to “systematically evangelise and civilize the great regions of central Germany, of founding an organized church, and of creating a hierarchy under the direct commission of the Holy See”.²²⁸ According to the Benedictine monks, he is on a par with St Paul and St Francis Xavier.²²⁹ His influence on the history of Europe should not just be viewed in terms of religion, but also that of state, as a result of the manner in which he established relationships between popes and emperors. His monasteries also influenced education and literacy in the regions in which they were established, since his aim was not just to christianise the heathen areas of Europe, but also to civilise them.²³⁰

In art works, his symbol is a book, pierced with a sword, or he is portrayed as felling an oak tree²³¹ (according to the legend of the felling of the sacred oak at Geismar²³²). The oldest surviving painting of Boniface is from a tenth-century Sacramentary of Fulda, which now hangs in Bamberg.²³³ Another painting dates from the twelfth century, where the saint is depicted in his dying moments, holding the gospel-book, already badly damaged. Later, in baroque and classical paintings, he is depicted holding his staff.²³⁴

Boniface was one of the greatest missionaries of the Middle Ages, and his work, such as his many letters, has survived him. Some poems and fifteen sermons, which he wrote while working as a teacher at the abbey of Nursling, have also survived.²³⁵ In 1874, Pope Pius IX made his feast day universally applicable to all Catholic churches.²³⁶

²³¹ Millard, The book of saints, 99.

²³² According to Farmer, ed., "Boniface", The Oxford dictionary of saints - Oxford reference online, <http://www.oxfordreference.com>, the pagans worshipped a certain tree, a sacred oak at Geismar, which is near Hesse. Boniface apparently challenged them: he would take an axe to the tree, and they would see for themselves who the stronger God was, Christ or the pagan gods they worshipped. After he completely felled the tree, which the pagan gods failed to protect, many converted to Christianity.

4.3.2 Sources for the versified office for St Boniface

The version of the versified office for St Boniface in PfA 53 is unique to this manuscript. It is also incomplete.²³⁷ It is not included in Analecta hymnica medii aevi, or in LMLO.

PfA 53 follows a partial serial modal ordering. In the third Nocturn, the eighth responsory is in mode 5T and the ninth responsory is in mode 7. A transcription of the versified office for St Boniface in PfA 53 appears on pp. 131-140 in volume two.

4.4 The versified office for St Achacius and the 10 000 martyrs

4.4.1 The legend of St Achacius

There is little information about this particular saint.²³⁸ *A dictionary of Christian biography*²³⁹ discusses the lives of eight people with the name Acacius, Achatius or Achatio, all of them bishops. The Achacius of this versified office (not a bishop), who supposedly died on Mount Ararat with the ten thousand soldiers under his command, belongs to a mythical cult that probably began in Armenia.²⁴⁰

In the fourth quarter of the fourteenth century, Petrus de Natalibus compiled the most comprehensive account of the saint's legend.²⁴¹ According to this narrative, Achacius was a general under Emperors Hadrian and Antonius, who were sent, with nine thousand men under their command, to destroy a rebel tribe. On their way to the battle, an angel appeared to them and promised them victory over their enemies if they embraced the true faith. All nine thousand men immediately converted to Christianity. After the battle, angels instructed them in their newfound faith on Mount Ararat.²⁴²

The emperors, who had cowardly fled the scene of the battle before it started, heard of this conversion and demanded that the men renounce their new faith. When they refused, the emperors called together a huge army under seven kings and went to Mount Ararat. When ²³⁷ Ossing, Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense, 208.

²³⁸ Thomayer agrees with this statement. During his research, he found that most of the saints with the name Achacius (the name might be spelled differently), originated during the early era of Christianity, and that these saints were mostly from the Eastern part of the Roman Empire. Thomayer published a diplomatic edition of an office for St Achacius in the manuscript clm 22241 of the Bavarian State Library (D-Mbs clm 22241). This office is not based on the same text as the office in PfA 53. This diplomatic edition is based on the text in Analecta hymnica, vol. 5, no. 28 - Letetur ecclesia. PfA 53 contains the text in Analecta hymnica, vol. 5, no. 30 - O rex regum Domine. See Thomayer, "Historia Sancti Achacii", vii-xi.

Achacius and his men refused to engage in battle, the emperors ordered their army to torture the Christians. According to the legend, the army's efforts were foiled by the angels; when the army tried to stone them, the angels made the rocks bounce back from the Christians without harming them. They were ordered to be whipped, but the whips could not harm the Christians. The Christians were ordered to walk over sharpened spikes, but the angels cleared these from their way. On seeing all these miraculous wonders, another one thousand men converted to the Christian faith, bringing the number to ten thousand. King Sapor then ordered that they be crowned with thorns and crucified like Christ. All the men died on Mount Ararat.²⁴³

These martyrs were very popular during the time of the Crusades (the cult seems to have developed during the twelfth century), gaining in popularity during the thirteenth century.²⁴⁴ Achacius was also included among the fourteen intercessors.²⁴⁵ Achacius and the martyrs are patrons of good health of the body and the spirit; according to the legend, Achacius, as he was preparing to die by crucifixion for his faith, asked the Lord to bless those who invoke his name with good health of the spirit and the body.²⁴⁶

There are art works, from the thirteenth to the sixteenth centuries, which attest to the popularity of this cult, particularly in Germany and Switzerland. Although Achacius is sometimes portrayed alone with a thorn bush, the scene usually portrays the mass martyrdom; sometimes by crucifixion, other times by "impalement on thorns or thorny trees".²⁴⁷ A fifteenth-century stained-glass window in Berne depicts the most complete story of the martyrdom. Many towns claim to have relics from this event, notably Cologne and Prague. The feast is celebrated on 22 June.²⁴⁸

D-MÜd PfA Hs 132.²⁵⁰ The edition of the text in *Analecta hymnica*²⁵¹ is based on breviaries from Münster and is listed in LMLO.²⁵² A survey of Jammer's study of the versified office antiphons²⁵³ led to another antiphoner that, as in the case of one of the Gertrude sources, is also from Kalkar, D-MÜd PfA Hs 199.²⁵⁴ This office does not digress from the strictest serial modal ordering. The ninth antiphon and the ninth responsory are in mode 1. Transcriptions of the versified office for St Achacius in PfA 53, PfA 199 and PfA 132 appear on pp. 141-179 in volume two.

5 Editorial method

The editorial method followed here is the same as that used for the Christmas responsories in Chapter 2.

In some manuscripts, the scribe places the b-flat at the beginning of the staff as an indication that the flat should be read throughout the entire line, or perhaps even the entire chant. The transcriptions follow this practice. When flats appear inconsistently in front of the pitch b in some chants, such as those in modes 5 and 6 – where one normally expects the accidental to be used throughout the chant, according to late medieval practice – the flat is placed in brackets at the beginning of the staff.

The edition of the plainchant melodies employs the following symbols to identify the sources:

- F: PfA 53
- T1: B-TO 63
- T2: B-TO 64
- K1: PfA 199
- K2: PfA 202

Chapter 4

The textual contents of the Antiphonale Monasteriense and PfA 53

1 Introduction

The following table presents a comparison of the textual content of the Antiphonale Monasteriense and PfA 53. The data presented here is an extract from the electronic indices of these two manuscripts, following the guidelines as set out on the Cantus website.²⁵⁵

The main left and right columns contain data from the Antiphonale Monasteriense and PfA 53 respectively. Each of these columns is subdivided into further columns for the data contained in the two documents. In order to economise on printing space, some sections in which one of the sources does not have the related material, the data is provided in two columns, separated by a vertical line, for a single source. See for example, Antiphonale Monasteriense, fol. 399v06 - 501r03.

The feast names appear as the main or primary headings, in large bold, italic typeface, in the centre of each column. The feasts follow the liturgical order of the sources. A feast name in brackets indicates a memorial chant sung after Lauds or Vespers of another feast. In Office books, Lauds and Vespers often conclude with additional devotions, such as commemorations, memorials and suffrages, which follow the collect of the service. The distinction between these three devotions is often difficult to establish, and their use varies between sources. Memorial chants are sung when a lesser feast coincides with a main feast that takes precedence.²⁵⁶ If, for example, First Vespers of a simple feast coincides with Second Vespers of a double feast, the celebration of the Vespers service for the simple feast can be abbreviated to a chant and a collect performed after the full Second Vespers service of the double feast.

While the feast names should be clear to readers who are familiar with Office books, some of the abbreviations require some clarification. The following table contains the most commonly used abbreviations:

|--------|------------------------------|
| Oct. X | Octave of feast X |
| X,8 | During the Octave of feast X |

| Fer. 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 | Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, etc. |
| Sabb. | “Sabbato” or Saturday |
| Dom. | “Dominica” (Sunday) or “Domini” (of the Lord) |
| Invent. | “Inventio” (finding of a saint’s relics) |
| Transl. | “Translatio” (moving of a saint’s relics) |

Table 26: Common abbreviations for feast names

“Oct.” designates the single day that falls one week after the original feast (the Octave), while “,8” designates the entire week following the original feast (including the Octave). “Die 2” means “Day 2” or the day after a feast, and is usually applied to feasts that can fall on any day of the week (for example, Christmas). “Feria 2” means “Day 2 of the week” (thus Monday) and is usually used for feasts that do not fall on different days of the week (for example, Easter Sunday or Ascension Thursday).

Abbreviations for the different Office services also appear in the centre of the columns, in a smaller bold typeface. The following table explains these abbreviations:

| Office service | Explanation |
|-----------------------|---|
| V | First Vespers |
| C | Compline |
| M | Matins |
| L | Lauds |
| P | Prime |
| T | Terce |
| S | Sext |
| N | None |
| V2 | Second Vespers |
| D | Day Hours |
| R | Memorial |
| E | Antiphons for the Magnificat or Benedictus (“in evangelio ”) |
| H | Antiphons based on texts from the Historia |
| X | Supplementary chants |

Table 27: Abbreviations for Office services

In the remainder of the data, each line in a particular main column contains data for one specific chant. In the description that follows, the term “column” refers to the columns that subdivide the main columns.

The first column on the left contains the folio number and side of the page. The numbers appear in three digits with leading zeros, where necessary. The fourth character, which is usually either “r[ecto]” or “v[erso]”, indicates the side of the folio. Letters from the alphabet following “v” solve the problem of duplicate folio numbers in a source. In PfA 53, for example, folio 123 is numbered twice. The first folio 123 appears as “123r” and 123v”, while the subsequent folio 123 appears as “123w” (recto side) and “123x” (verso side).

The second column contains a two-character sequence number, indicating the order in which the chants appear on each side of a folio. In PfA 53, the scribe has the habit of reversing the order of some items that appear only as text incipits or as full texts without notation. See, for example, the responsories for “Sabb. de Passione” on folio 89r. One can usually determine the correct order of such items by checking the place in the manuscript where the full texts with notation appear. Items such as this appear in their correct liturgical order in the comparative tables:

Sabb. de Passione

| 08 R | 2 | Qui custodiebant* | cao7475 |
| 07 R | 3 | Adjutor et protector* | cao6036 |

The number “99” in this column indicates the beginning of a lacuna. If the page following the lacuna contains a partial chant, this chant is marked as “00” in the sequence.

The third column indicates the genre of the chant. The following list contains the abbreviations and explanations for the genres:

| Genre | Explanation |
|--------------|--------------------|
| A | Antiphon |
| AV | Antiphon Verse |
| R | Responsory |
| V | Responsory Verse |
| W | Versicle |
| H | Hymn |

| Genre | Explanation |

| I | Invitatory antiphon |
| P | Invitatory Psalm |
| M | Miscellaneous (chants in this group include the Te Deum , Versus in Triduo , or prosulae , and the Mass chants, such as sequences) |
| Al | Alleluia chants of the Mass |
| Gr | Graduals and their verses |

Table 28: Abbreviations for chant genres

The fourth column indicates the position of a chant within a particular service. It also identifies the liturgical role of a particular chant. The following conventions apply:

- In Lauds and Vespers, the antiphons for psalms are numbered in an order that normally represents the position of the chant in the Office.
- In those cases where more than five antiphons are given for the psalms of Lauds and Vespers, every effort is made to determine the correct position of possible alternative chants by, for example, referring to rubrics.
- If only one antiphon is provided for the psalms of Lauds or Vespers and this antiphon is clearly the beginning of a series for that Office, it is numbered as “1”. The position of a single antiphon, intended for use with all of the psalms, is marked as “p”.
- In Offices (such as Terce, Sext and None) that only have one chant of a particular genre, the position remains blank. This rule also applies to responses of the single responsory of Vespers, but not to its verse.
- Verses for antiphons and responses are always numbered in sequence “01”, “02” etc. This also applies to single verses.
- If a source clearly subdivides nine-lesson Offices of Matins into Nocturns, the antiphons and responses are each given a pair of numbers separated by a period, for example, “1.2”. The first number identifies the Nocturn, while the second identifies the position of the chant within in the Nocturn. When only one antiphon appears for all the psalms of a Nocturn, it has a number that designates the Nocturn, followed by a period and a space, for example, “1.”. If the source does not divide Matins into Nocturns, the antiphons and responses are numbered in series.
- A Matins versicle appears with a number that identifies the Nocturn in which it appears, followed by a period and a space.

- Antiphons for Canticles are identified as follows: “M” for the Magnificat, “B” for the Benedictus, “N” for the Nunc dimittis and “E” if the source does not have a clear rubric differentiating between “M” and “B”.
- If the Office for a memorial chant is specified, “R” appears in the position column. If the Office is not specified, “R” is used in the office column and the chants are numbered in sequence.
- If more than one chant appears for the same position, these chants are considered as alternatives and marked identically. When two chants of a particular genre are given, and the Office only requires one, the position column remains blank. An exception to this rule is when there are more than one Magnificat or Benedictus chant for a specific Office – these are then numbered as “1M”, “2M”, etc. (or “1B”, “2B”, etc.).

The fifth column includes the text incipit, or first few words, of the chant. Cantus guidelines make provision for a maximum of twenty-nine characters in this field and the incipit should include the maximum number of words that can fit into this space, with the last word completed. Hyphenated words sometimes help to distinguish between otherwise identical incipits.

Spelling is normalized, mainly according to the conventions of volumes 3 and 4 of CAO.²⁵⁷ The grammar and case endings, as well as the verb tense and number, are those of the manuscript. If the manuscript has differences in wording from that in CAO, these are preserved, but punctuation is omitted. Capitalization is limited to proper names of persons and places, places of origin and nationalities.

Words that are not capitalized include: deus, eli, pater, mater, paradisi, dominus, pharaone, orientis, filium, christianitatis, christus, magi, agnum, seraphim, trinitatis, pascha, sabaoth, and paraclitus.

An asterisk (*) marks the chants that are given only in incipit in the manuscript. If a chant text only consists of the repetitions of the word alleluia, a lower-case Roman numeral indicates the number of repetitions, for example, “Alleluia iv”.

The sixth column contains the chant identification number. When the text features in volume three or four of CAO, the first three characters of this field are “cao”, followed by the number assigned to the text of this chant in CAO. The code “can” identifies chants with illegible incipits (“can0000”), the lesser Doxology that sometimes serves as a responsory verse (“can9000”) and refrains associated with the Versus in Triduo (“can9040”). For other texts not in CAO, a three-character code followed by a four-digit number appears in this space. Antiphonale Monasteriense texts that do not feature in CAO have the code “mon”, while those in PfA 53 have “fre”.

The suffix that sometimes follows the seventh character of the chant identification number, is used to distinguish between a response (or antiphon) and its verse. These are similar to those in CAO, with the exception that they are in lower case. The letter “z” signifies responsory verses that do not appear in the same position in CAO.

Conclusion

1 Introduction

This study reaffirms Ossing's conclusions about PfA 53. It belongs to the Office tradition of the diocese of Münster by virtue of not only its geographical location, but also its textual and musical content. The comparative tables in Chapter 4 clearly show that apart from the lacunae in PfA 53, this manuscript and the Antiphonale Monasteriense show a great degree of similarity for the items that appear on the liturgical occasions that they share.

Some items that would at first glance appear to be additions or omissions from the standard liturgical order in one of the sources should not be considered as such, since the celebrants would have added these after consulting other books such as a breviary, an ordinal or a ferial psalter. PfA 53, for example, contains several incipits for hymns that do not appear in the Antiphonale Monasteriense, while the latter source tends to include many more incipits for items that are common to more than one liturgical occasion. One should consider the omission of the ferial psalter antiphons (including invitatory antiphons and those for First Vespers on Septuagesima Sunday) and most of the memorial antiphons from PfA 53, as well as details regarding versicles and items for the Little Hours in both sources, in the same light.

There are also instances where one of the sources provides a full set of antiphons for the psalms of an Office service, while the other provides only a single antiphon. Once again, a closer inspection of the sources shows that these are not cases of a departure from the standard liturgical order, but rather the omission of items that the celebrants could read from somewhere else. Second Vespers in the Office for Stephen the First Martyr and Holy Innocents provide an example. The Common of One Martyr and the Common of Many Martyrs provide the antiphons for the psalms at Second Vespers for these two feasts. In the case of the Antiphonale Monasteriense, all of these antiphons appear under the feasts of Stephen and the Holy Innocents, while PfA 53 provides the entire list in its Communale Sanctorum.

There is also some disparity with regard to the designation of First Vespers for Sundays. In some cases, for example, one of the sources follows the practice common to the ferial psalter of presenting the antiphons for First Vespers for a Sunday as part of the Saturday sequence

(that is, Second Vespers on the Saturday).²⁵⁸ An example of this appears in First Vespers for Passion Sunday, where PfA 53 has the correct designation of First Vespers of this day, while the Antiphonale Monasteriense lists the items for this Office under Second Vespers for Saturday in the fourth week of Lent.

A related disparity occurs in the designation of the Gospel antiphons for Matins and Lauds. The indices only indicate Magnificat and Benedictus antiphons as such, if the particular source supplies a clear rubric. In all cases where it is clear that a Gospel antiphon is intended, but the source does not supply a rubric, such antiphons are given the designation of “E” (for Evangelium), even if one can identify the liturgical identification from its position in the source. There are thus several instances where one of these antiphons is clearly identified as belonging to either Vespers or Lauds, while others are simply marked as “E”.

There are also a few instances of minor spelling and other variants between the two sources: (variants in Antiphonale Monasteriense are listed first):²⁵⁹

- “Et adorabunt eum omnes reges” and “Et adorabunt eum omnes tribus” for the verse of the sixth responsory of the Epiphany;
- “Dum deambulet dominus” and “Cum deambulet dominus” for the ninth responsory of Septuagesima Sunday;
- “Vide si tunica et filii tui Jo[seph]” and “Vide si tunica filii tui sit” for the verse of the third responsory for the third Sunday in Lent;
- “Biennium est quod fames [coepit]” and “Biennium est quod fames coepit” for the verse of one of the additional responsories for the third Sunday in Lent;
- “Cantate deo alleluia” and “Cantate domino alleluia” for the first responsory of Thursday in the fifth week after Easter;
- “Dum appropinquaret dominus” and “Cum appropinquaret dominus” for one of the Gospel antiphons on the eleventh Sunday after Pentecost;
- “In circuitu tuo domine lumen” and “In circuitu tui domino lumen” for the fourth responsory for the Common of Many Martyrs;
- “Benedictus es et bene tibi” and “Beatus es et bene tibi” for the verse of the eighth responsory in the office for Fabian and Sebastian;

²⁵⁸ See Harper, The forms and order of Western liturgy, 56.

²⁵⁹ The reader should keep in mind that the electronic indices follow Cantus spelling guidelines for the incipits. A variant such as “veruntamen” (AM fol. 338v) and “verumptamen” (PfA 53 fol. 241r), which is normalised to “veruntamen” in the indices, does not appear in the following list.

- “Vita vir sanctus vir quoque” (an obvious mistake) and “Vita vir sanctus verbo quoque” for the second responsory of the Liudger Office;
- “Mundus quidem gaudebit vos” and “Mundus autem gaudebit vos” for the verse of the third responsory for the Common of Many Martyrs in Paschal Time;
- “Verumtamen domine non mea [voluntas]” and “Verumtamen domine non [voluntas mea]” for the verse of the fifth responsory for the Vitus Office;
- “A Christo de caelo vocatus et” and “A Christo vocatus et in terra” for the verse of the ninth responsory in the office for Paul;
- “Sicut sol oriens in mundo in” and “Sicut sol oriens mundo in” for the ninth responsory of the Anne Office;
- “Cum inventum esset” and “Dum inventum esset” for the fifth Lauds antiphon in the office for the Finding of Stephen.

The significance of variants such as this will only become clearer once more sources from the diocese of Münster are indexed. The researcher will then be able to use such variance in order to establish a stemma of related sources.

Items appearing as text incipits in one source and full texts in another are also not considered as a major point of variance. Such incipits usually occur in PfA 53 and one can assume that their full statements would either be in other sections of this manuscript, excluded as a result of lacunae, or included in supplementary liturgical books.

The tables and discussion below also disregard items related to the lacunae and the later insertions and additions appearing on fol. 170, fol. 191 – 192 and fol. 278 in PfA 53.

If one disregards the points of variance mentioned above, differences between the two sources are mainly limited to three categories:

- 1 Additional Gospel antiphons, some alternative invitatory antiphons and supplementary chants (for example, those marked as “X”) that appear mainly in the Antiphonale Monasteriense. Here one should keep in mind that when the Antiphonale Monasteriense was compiled in the 1530s, it was intended for a wider audience, which not only included the cathedral in Münster,²⁶⁰ but also the parish churches of the diocese. It thus follows that its coverage of the liturgy would be much wider than an antiphonal such as PfA 53, which was intended for a particular church.

²⁶⁰ See Ossing, Untersuchungen zum Antiphonale Monasteriense, 17 on the wide dissemination of extant copies of the Antiphonale throughout the diocese of Münster.

- 2 Items with proper chants that appear in only one of the sources. This category includes feasts such as those of Anne and Gertrude for which PfA 53 supplies proper items, while the Antiphonale Monasteriense calls for most of the chants to be taken from the communale.
- 3 There are a few other discrepancies. These are listed below:
 - 3.1 The Magnificat antiphon for Second Vespers of the office for John the Evangelist (AM, cao3421; PfA 53, cao2511);
 - 3.2 the inclusion in PfA 53 of proper invitatory antiphons for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in Holy Week that are absent from the Antiphonale Monasteriense (cao1168, cao1121 and cao1122);
 - 3.3 the Magnificat antiphon for Second Vespers of Tuesday in Holy Week (AM, cao3874; PfA 53, cao4349)
 - 3.4 the different responsories at First Vespers in the office for the Blessed Sacrament (Corpus Christi: mon0880 and fre0648) and at the end of the third Nocturn in the office for the Finding of Stephen (cao7613 and cao7023);
 - 3.5 the different responsory verses for some of the historia responsories De Machabaeis (AM, cao6324a and PfA 53, cao6324b; AM, cao7786a and PfA 53, cao7786z);
 - 3.6 the exclusion in PfA 53 of the antiphons for the psalms and lesser canticle of Lauds for the Common of one Confessor, not Pope (cao2370, cao2734, cao2868, cao1634 and cao4871);
 - 3.7 a proper Nunc dimittis antiphon for Compline after First Vespers for the Conversion of Paul in the Antiphonale Monasteriense;
 - 3.8 the inclusion in PfA 53 of a memorial antiphon for the Octave of John the Baptist after Second Vespers of Paul (cao2704, an antiphon that is completely absent from the Antiphonale Monasteriense);
 - 3.9 some disagreements about the responsories prescribed for the feast of Mary Magdalene.
- 4 At this point one can also return to one of Ossing's observations, highlighted in the Introduction to this dissertation. The reader will recall that Ossing remarks that the series of responsories for Quinquagesima Sunday is unique to PfA 53 and only one other Münster source, GV 230. Although the parameters for the comparison of the complete content of sources from the diocese of Münster, established for this dissertation, do not extend beyond the Antiphonale Monasteriense, other disparate orderings are listed here for the purposes of further studies that could contribute to the establishment of the lineage of PfA 53:

- 4.1 the responsories for the Octave of the Epiphany;
- 4.2 the responsories for the second Sunday in Lent;
- 4.3 the responsories for the third Sunday in Lent;
- 4.4 the responsories for Passion Sunday;
- 4.5 the responsories of the third Nocturn for the Common of One Martyr;
- 4.6 the responsories for the Common of Virgins
- 4.7 the responsories in the office for Agatha; and
- 4.8 the responsories for the Mary Magdalene Office, which should be considered together with the disparities regarding the prescribed responsory texts.

The following tables list the invitatory antiphons, other antiphons and responsories that are unique to each of the two sources. These tables exclude hymns, versicles and texts that only appear as incipits and items for which one cannot determine uniqueness, due to the lacunae in PfA 53.

The first column in the table presents the feast name (according to Cantus conventions). The second and third columns contain the folio and sequence numbers of the chant. The fourth, fifth and sixth columns contain, respectively, the abbreviation for the Office, the twenty-nine-character text incipit and the chant identification number.

3 Modal variance

The one aspect that the comparative table in Chapter 4 does not allow one to address is the presence of melodic and modal variance. During the creation of the indices, it became clear that the Antiphonale Monasteriense and PfA 53 always share similar melodies for the same texts with some internal minor melodic and notational variance, such as those discussed in Chapter 2. Apart from some melodies that appear in a transposed mode, the same conclusion holds for the modal assignments:

- “Credo videre bona domini”, the fifth antiphon at Matins of Holy Saturday, is in mode 4T in the Antiphonale Monasteriense and in mode 4 in PfA 53;

- The invitatory antiphon “Surrexit dominus vere” of Wednesday after Easter is in mode 6T in the Antiphonale Monasteriense and in mode 6 in PfA 53;
- Nisi diligenter perfeceris”, the seventh antiphon at Matins in the office for Agatha, is in mode 4 in the Antiphonale Monasteriense and in mode 4T in PfA 53.

There is one example of a different modal assignment for the same chant. In the Antiphonale Monasteriense the antiphon at Second Vespers in the office for St Cecilia, “O beata Caecilia quae duo fratres” is in mode 1, while the same chant in the later addition to PfA 53, on fol. 278v, is in mode 2. Closer inspection shows that while the two antiphons share the same melody, the range of the melody in PfA 53 is adapted for mode 2. This is most likely an indication that the later addition in PfA 53 was taken from a book that did not originate in the diocese of Münster.

As in the case of the textual variants and unica, variants such as this will only gain greater significance as the overarching project, to which this dissertation contributes, expands the pool of data through the addition of other sources from the diocese of Münster.

Indices of Antiphons, Hymns and Responsories in PfA 53

The format of the indices follows the Cantus guidelines²⁶¹ explained in Chapter 4. The indices add mode and differentia data.

The mode identifier is normally a single number, with the values “1” through “8”. An asterisk in this column indicates that the chant appears without notation.. A lower-case “r” is used for the standard formulas of short responsories and versicles. If an “S” follows the modal number, this symbolises a responsory verse that is sung to a special melody, rather than to the standard responsory verse tone, typical of its mode. The letter “T” indicates that a chant is written in transposition. A question mark in this column indicates that the mode of the chant is unidentifiable, while a modal value followed by a question mark indicates uncertainty concerning the modal assignment.

The differentia identifier is a one -digit number, or numbers and letters in combination, which refers to either the differentia (the termination of the psalm tone to be employed in connection with a particular antiphon), or to the tone to be employed with an invitational antiphon.

The image displays a musical score for nine voices, labeled F, A, Av, K, N1, N2, O, Nb, and H. Each voice part is written on a five-line staff with a treble clef and a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics, written in Latin, are: "ce- les- ti- a re- vo- ca- ret gau- det excer- ci- tus". The notes are color-coded: blue for the first four voices (F, A, Av, K) and red for the remaining five (N1, N2, O, Nb, H). The lyrics are printed below each staff, aligned with the corresponding notes.

The image displays a musical score for a liturgical setting, likely a Mass. It consists of nine staves, each representing a different vocal part. The lyrics are in Latin and are written below the notes. The staves are labeled with letters: F, A, Av, K, N1, N2, O, Nb, and H. The lyrics are: ho-mi-ni-bus bone vo-lun-ta-tis. Quia sa-lus. The notes are color-coded: black for the first part of each phrase, red for the second, and blue for the third. The staves are arranged in a single column, with the lyrics aligned under the corresponding notes.

The image displays a musical score for eight voices, labeled F, A, Av, K, N1, N2, O, Nb, and H. Each voice part is written on a single staff with a treble clef. The lyrics 'fa- bri-ce mun-di.' are written below the staves. The notes are color-coded: red for the first syllable 'fa-', blue for the second syllable 'bri-ce', and green for the third syllable 'mun-di.'. The notes are placed on vertical stems that extend from the staff lines. The score is arranged in a vertical column, with each voice part occupying its own line.

This musical score is for a nine-voice setting of a Latin text. The voices are arranged in a choir with the following parts: Soprano (F), Alto (A), Alto/Contralto (Av), Tenor (K), Tenor 1 (N1), Tenor 2 (N2), Organ (O), Bass 1 (Nb), and Bass 2 (H). The lyrics are 'Tam- quam sponsus Domi- nus'. The notation uses a system of red and blue dots on a five-line staff, with a treble clef and a key signature of one flat (B-flat). The lyrics are written below the staves, with hyphens indicating syllables that span across measures. The organ part (O) is marked with a 'V.' and a 'Tam-'.

The image displays a musical score for nine voices, labeled F, A, Av, K, N1, N2, O, Nb, and H. Each voice part is written on a single staff with a treble clef. The lyrics are in Latin: "que porta-ve-runt e- ter- ni pa-tris fi- li- um". The notes are color-coded: blue for the first and fourth syllables of each phrase, and red for the second and third syllables. The vocal lines are arranged in a descending order of pitch, with F being the highest and H being the lowest.

The musical score is presented on eight staves, each with a unique label on the left: F, A, Av, K, N1, N2, O, and Nb. Each staff contains a line of music in a single melodic line, with notes colored blue or red. Below each staff is the Latin text: "R. Ver- bum ca-ro fac-tum est et ha- bi-ta- vit". The text is aligned with the notes, with hyphens indicating syllables that span multiple notes. The staves are arranged vertically, and the music is written in a simple, clear style.
